U.S. Shuns Long Truce For Year End in Viet

Police Ride Into Crowd To Halt Viet Marchers

MONTREAL (CP)—Five policemen and several demonstrators were injured Friday night in a wild melee outside the U.S. consulate where 2,000 students were protesting against the war in Vietnam.

None of the injuries was serious in the fight which broke out when mounted policemen charged into the crowd in an attempt to choke off the 45-minute demonstration.

Police arrested 48 demonstrators after many had hurled bottles of paint and stones at the building, smashing windows and smearing the American eagle plaque with blood-red paint.

The demonstration started in Dominion Square in downtown Montreal and the marchers paraded up various streets and around cars before stopping in front of the consulate.

GROUPS JOIN

The original marchers were students from the University of Montreal who joined up with students from McGill and Sir George Williams universities as they marched up the mountain.

The dozen police officers on horses stood by as Pierre Lefrancois, president of l'Union general des etudiants du Quebec —which organized the demonstration—spoke to the crowd.

When the slogan-shouting and stone-throwing began, the horses were moved in. Several women broke into hysterics as the mounted police charged through the crowd scattering the demonstrators.

The protestors retaliated with a barrage of sticks, stones and heaps of garbage that lined the street in garbage cans awaiting collection.

QUEBEC-WIDE PROTEST

The demonstration in Montreal was part of a province-wide protest against American action in Vietnam. Students in at least 10 communities joined in demonstrations.

Francis Cunningham, U.S. consul in Quebec City, accepted a letter condemning American participation in the Vietnamese war as about 800 students paraded through the provincial capital. The students burned President Johnson in effigy.

When the Montreal demonstrators arrived at the consulate about 6:15 p.m., they were met by the mounted policemen, 50 officers on motorcycles and about 100 constables on foot carrying nightsticks.

At least one police car was battered and its windows smashed as the students split into small groups to retreat down side streets.

PRICELESS articles were stolen from country home of Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery Friday night while he was in London celebrating his 80th birthday. The British war hero today appealed for return of the historic gifts, many of which were given him by various governments.

Canadian Gives Life To Save 200 Others

CALCUTTA, India (AP) — Steel workers in a town north of here paid homage Friday to the memory of a Canadian engineer who sacrificed his life to save 200 workers from being blown up in a plant accident.

Frank Noble, whose Canadian hometown was not known here, lost his life last week at an alloy steel plant in Durgapur, a steel town about 100 miles northwest of here.

Noble, an employee of Atlas Steel of Canada, was working with five other persons at a scarfing machine when an oxygen pipe exploded. Five persons were seriously injured.

Noble was not badly injured, but he went back inside the machine room to switch off the oxygen pipe. He came out severely burned and died in hospital.

Russia Clips UN Debate On Mideast

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Weary members of the United Nations Security Council embarked today on a weekend of negotiations over three rival resolutions aimed at breaking the Middle East stalemate.

The 15-nation council had hoped to reach a showdown vote Friday but adjourned after nine minutes. Bulgaria, at the obvious behest of the Soviet Union, asked for the adjournment until Monday, saying it awaited instructions from home.

One informed source said the Russians had sought a private agreement for the adjournment, but U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg retorted: "If you want a delay, you'll have to stand up and ask for it." Incensed, the Russians handed the assignment to Bulgaria, the other Communist member of the council.

Britain's Lord Caradon told reporters later that Council President Manadou Kante of Mali had promised to keep the group in session all night Monday if need be to reach a decision.

The sudden postponement, which caught many diplomats by surprise, aroused considerable speculation.

ISRAELIS HOPEFUL

A high Israeli source said: "The British have broken through and have a majority for their resolution and the Russians don't like that."

One diplomatic source said the Soviet Union hopes to persuade Argentina and Brazil to introduce a resolution they have been holding up at the request of Israel. The Latin American proposal is closer to the Arab position than the one introduced by Britain.

Informed sources said that Syria, the Sudan and Algeria have come out privately against the British draft.

One Soviet delegate described the British compromise proposal as a "second American draft."

The Arabs have been supporting a rival draft submitted by India, Mali and Nigeria. It demands Israeli withdrawal from "all the territories occupied as a result of the recent conflict."

The Canadian view is that the British proposal is a carefully-worded attempt to find a balance between the two other plans.

RUNNING for president of the U.S. is Michigan Republican Governor George Romney, 60, who made formal announcement today, saying he hopes to lead his country back to morality and out of the Vietnam war. He is first major contender to declare publicly as an aspirant for November, 1968, election.

WIRE BRIEFS

Heavy Fighting in Viet Highlands

SAIGON (AP)—Heavy fighting broke out today nine miles west of Dak To in South Vietnam's embattled central highlands where U.S. forces drove North Vietnamese troops from two strategic peaks Friday.

Mill Closure Sparks March

SYDNEY (CP)—About 20,000 persons were expected to take part in a "parade of concern" through Sydney streets Sunday.

The parade, designed to focus national attention on the economic problems of the area, was organized after Dominion Steel and Coal Corp. announced Oct. 13 it would close the steel mill here next spring.

Decision Due Monday on Pound Crisis

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain today tensely awaited an expected government announcement on measures to solve the latest sterling crisis, following three days of speculation and relentless pressure on the pound.

Financial experts agree that, following another heavy day for the pound on foreign exchange markets Friday, the government would have to break its silence and announce a decision before Monday.

Big Liner Crippled By Fire

HALIFAX (CP)—The Swedish-American liner Gripsholm was reported heading for New York at eight knots this morning after making repairs to her port engine damaged by an engine room fire Friday night.

Indian Member of ICC Killed in Raid

NEW DELHI (AP)—A spokesman for the Indian government said today it is awaiting details on reports that an Indian sergeant was killed and another Indian national injured in U.S. air raids on Hanoi Friday.

Nhan Dan, North Vietnam's official newspaper, says that U.S. raiders "fired missiles on the office of Indian delegation to the Hanoi bureau of the International Control Commission, killing or wounding a number of Indian nationals."

Cong Offer Rebuffed

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — U.S. officials indicated Friday night the U.S. is unlikely to go along with a Viet Cong announcement that it would halt the Vietnam war for 13 days of holiday ceasefires.

There was no immediate formal comment, but informed officials reacted quickly to an announcement over the Viet Cong's Clandestine Liberation Radio, broadcasting from somewhere in the jungle.

They said it is "extremely unlikely" the U.S. would agree to the guerrilla plan for three-day ceasefires at Christmas and New Year's, and another seven days over the Vietnamese New Year celebrations at the end of January and beginning of February.

One official reiterated American objections to "prolonged truces" unless the Communists agreed to "some de-escalatory action."

"North Vietnam has only taken advantage of past cease fires to rush supplies to its forces and the Viet Cong in the South," he said.

The Viet Cong radio said it was calling the truces for reasons of "humanity." It linked the announcement with a new call to the South Vietnamese people to "rise up suddenly against the Americans to win back their freedom and sovereignty."

South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu indicated earlier he favors one-day truces for Christmas and New Year's and two days for Tet, the South Vietnamese New Year.

DISCUSS SITUATION

President Johnson and U.S. Vietnam Commander Gen. William C. Westmoreland are reliably reported to have discussed the American position on holiday truces this week, as the president and his top advisers reviewed the war.

Johnson was reliably reported to oppose any long ceasefires.

Westmoreland, as have other top U.S. military men, publicly voiced his opposition to any halts in bombing North Vietnam, though he said he could "live with" brief ceasefires.

KENNEDY
. . . reaction typical

Extremists Condemned By Kennedy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Robert F. Kennedy (Dem.-N.Y.) condemns "extremists on both sides" of the Vietnam issue, saying they make it difficult to carry on a responsible dialogue on war policies.

Kennedy, who has been restrained in his criticisms of President Johnson's course, said in an interview he agrees with the president that what Johnson called storm trooper tactics do not advance the case of dissenters.

By "extremists," Kennedy said he meant those who violently demonstrate against the president's policies and supporters of those policies who indulge in name-calling and question the patriotism of critics.

Kennedy's appeared to be a typical reaction to Friday's news conference, at which Johnson defended his policies in lively fashion.

However, Senator Albert Gore (Dem.-Tenn.), a Senate foreign relations committee member, challenged Johnson's contention that national security is involved in the war. He said Johnson engaged in oversimplifications which "create dissent rather than allay it."

TRUSTEES BLAME BUILDING FREEZE

School Shifts Loom in Area

Victoria area school trustees fear shift systems and higher building costs will follow a freeze in school building announced Friday.

"If they don't unplug this quickly it will mean gross overcrowding. Teachers won't tolerate crowded classrooms and I don't blame them. This means shifts," said Victoria school board chairman Peter Bunn.

"Every delay in our school program boosts the costs. The last freeze, followed by a carpenter's strike, increased the cost of some larger units 30 per cent," said Saanich school board chairman Mrs. Nora Lindsay.

"And a delay means a definite danger of shift systems," she added.

The trustees were commenting on the report of a new freeze on school building. It was made public following a meeting Friday between Greater Victoria trustees and provincial education department officials.

The freeze applies to school districts throughout the province.

Most of the districts have passed referendums for new schools and additions. Now they are waiting provincial approval of plans or permission to go to tender.

But the province, which would be required to pay up to 75 per cent of the cost in many cases, has dug in its heels.

The provincial agency which markets school board debentures will not try to raise money at current high interest rates.

The impasse was disclosed when Victoria trustees Bunn, Dr. Carron Jameson and Dr. Shorting met Deputy Education Minister Dr. Neil Perry and his administrators Frank Levirs and Joseph Phillipson.

The situation in Victoria is that almost $2.5 million in school projects are ready to go to tender—but the department has withheld final permission.

Dr. Jameson said the department indicated that only $100,000 of the total stands to be approved next week.

Stalled indefinitely are additions to Rockheights, Victor Street school for the retarded, Shelbourne, Hampton, Hillcrest, Richmond, Sir James Douglas and Quadra elementary schools.

The new Blanshard Street elementary school, which will replace the old North Ward, is unaffected by the freeze and work on it began Friday.

The freeze order revived the charge that British Columbia is starving services to people in order to feed all available monies into hydro projects on the Peace and Columbia rivers.

"The question becomes purely political—which has priority, schools or dams?" asked Dr. Jameson.

Said Mr. Bunn, "Mr. Bennett has already sacrificed the old people, is he now going to sacrifice the young?"

This was a reference to recent stories showing inadequacies in allowances for elderly people on welfare in boarding homes and private hospitals who obtain about half the assistance offered in Alberta.

Th' gov'mints bin blowin' hot an' cold on th' school freeze.

Quebec Eyes CBC Control

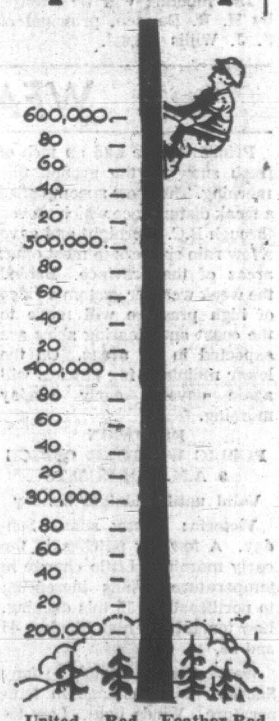
ST. JOHNS, Que. (CP) — Premier Daniel Johnson said today his Union Nationale government wants to gain control over the direction of the French-language section of the CBC.

He said at a press conference on the final day of the party's caucus of legislature members here that the federal government's new bill on broadcasting borders on "fascist" methods of control.

He said the Union Nationale caucus has decided to protest vigorously against that part of the bill saying the CBC should promote national unity.

United Appeal

Put Him Up On Top



United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal has given the public less than a week to rally round the spar tree. Today's audited total stands at $551,830 or 91.9 per cent of the $600,000 target. A booth has now been set up at Douglas and Yates where donations may be handed in until Friday.

Chinese Flee 'Blood-Drunk' Tribe

PONTIANAK (AP) — Dyak tribesmen in this jungled Indonesian island are continuing massive attacks on Chinese, killing scores and reverting to cannabalism.

Horror-stricken missionaries coming from the interior reported that eight men in one village were hacked to pieces.

At least 15 villages, populated predominantly by Chinese in the interior, have been demolished. Several have been burned to the ground.

Chinese, who control the economy here, are pouring out of the inland areas by the thousands. Each carries only a little cash and a cooking pot.

At least 15,000 refugees are jammed into crude quarters in this capital of West Kalimantan. Another 15,000 are staying in the coastal cities of Seipenju and Singkawang, but authorities now fear attacks on these areas.

The Dyak terror campaign, which began the last week of October, followed a declaration of war by the tribesmen of Chinese Communist guerrillas operating here.

Thousands of innocent Chinese have been dragged into the killings and estimates place the dead at about 70.

West Kamimantan is the base of the Sarawak Peoples Guerrilla Forces, about 1,000 strong and almost entirely Chinese.

They recently slaughtered 14 Dyak tribesmen. With army support, the Dyaks declared war on the guerrillas and went on a long-suppressed "blood drunk."

Cannibalism and head hunting have not been seen here in more than 15 years.

Talks Continue At Pacific Press

VANCOUVER (CP) — Contract negotiations are to continue Monday between three craft unions and Pacific Press Ltd. which prints the Sun and Province newspapers.

Ed Benson, company general manager, made the announcement after a day of resumed negotiations with the International Typographical Union, Mailers Union and Stereotypers Union Friday.

The unions had broken negotiations for a new contract Wednesday.

Prior to the announcement of continued bargaining, the company said in a statement that planned security measures were suspended "while present amicable discussions are in progress."

The Vancouver-New Westminster Newspaper Guild had also discontinued negotiations. It has not resumed talks with the company.

None of the unions have announced a strike date, though they can walk out at any time.

Earlier Friday, a short work stoppage erupted following a labor-management argument over cots being moved into the building.

Employees involved resumed work when the company agreed to leave the cots outside the building, said a union spokesman.

Company-announced security measures included the use of photo-identity cards by the employees to gain entrance into the building.

Other measures included closed-circuit television monitors of its shipping area, and an increased number of security personnel.

City Union Protests News Lack

A Victoria union sent a telegram to The Canadian Press in Vancouver Friday night protesting the "agency's failure to report all facets of the Pacific Press dispute.

"This has been noticed by our members who are able to contrast CP coverage with that of Vancouver radio and television stations," said Victoria Newspaper Guild, Local 223.

The telegram cited the absence of coverage of installation of closed-circuit television cameras at truck loading bays, company and union comments on this and condemnation by Vancouver Mayor Tom Campbell.

It also noted delays in reporting other facts, including an alleged American strikebreaker, a training school for management strikebreakers and a printers slowdown.

The telegram drew CP's attention to one of its stated principles "unbiased, fearless recording of fact" and expressed the hope that the principle "will be implemented even at this late date."

U.S. Warships To Pay Brief Weekend Visit

Two United States Navy destroyer-escorts will visit Victoria over the weekend.

The USS Brannon and the USS Whitehurst was scheduled to arrive at HMC Dockyard at 4 p.m.

They will leave Esquimalt Sunday morning.

The two warships belong to the Naval Reserve Destroyer Division of the U.S. Navy's 13th Naval District, Seattle, and will make the stop-over during a regular training cruise.

The warships are manned by 300 men.

Contributors Meet Monday

Contributors to the recent Kuper Island Indian Band fund campaign will meet in S. J. Willis Junior Secondary School Monday at 8 p.m. to consider disposition of a surplus.

The fund, organized to send the band of the Kuper Island Indian School to Expo, ended with a surplus of $5,800 due to several large last-minute contributions.

Trustees wish to acquaint donors with a proposal for annual awards to Indian students.

The meeting will be chaired by H. R. Dawson, principal of S. J. Willis School.

Principals Will Debate 'Ideal' School

What would the ideal elementary school be like?

This is the question to be debated by a panel of principals at a meeting of Willows Parent-Teacher Association Tuesday night.

Panelists will be Lake Hill principal David Jones; Richmond School principal Evan Oakley; Bank Street School principal Donald Henderson, and T. N. Curteis, principal at Willows.

The program, which starts at 8 p.m. in the school auditorium, will include a discussion period.

"Satellite light, satellite bright . . ."

Charman Seeks Tory Nomination

City realtor Eric Charman announced Friday he will seek the Progressive Conservative nomination for Victoria in the next federal election.

He also called for an early Conservative nominating convention in the riding, warning that "delays might cost the party dearly."

Mr. Charman said the bugle call has been sounded by Progressive Conservative national leader Robert Stanfield.

"I hope we are not going to be caught sitting around when they play reveille. And I hope all would-be candidates are sufficiently interested to make their intentions known."

Mr. Charman, 35, was narrowly defeated as a Tory candidate in Victoria in the 1965 federal election. The vote was Groos 14,061 and Charman 13,252, a difference of 809.

David Groos has held the seat for the Liberals since 1963.

N.S. 'Not Alone'

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson denied in the Commons Friday a suggestion by Opposition Leader Stanfield that Ottawa is leaving an attempt to rescue the Sydney steel industry entirely to the Nova Scotia government.

"If this were the case, we would not have spent hours last night discussing the situation with Premier Smith of Nova Scotia," Mr Pearson said.

Curtis to Keep Job With Radio

Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis said Friday he will continue to work for Radio Station CFAX if re-elected next month.

The reeve, who turned down a $2,500 pay raise on his municipal income of $7,500 last spring, said he would continue in the next two years as he has in the last three.

"I have not seen the interests of the municipality suffer," said the reeve, who holds a number of other municipal positions in addition to his radio work.

He is chairman of the Capital Regional District, on the executive of the Union of B.C. Municipalities and a number of local committees.

"There is a misconception I'm never at the hall," he said. "Most of my time is here (at the hall)."

COMPLETE PROJECTS

Asked for his election platform, Reeve Curtis said it is to see a number of municipal projects brought to completion.

These included the recreation program, with the ice arena and senior citizens building well on their way towards a building date, the remainder of the program, rebuilding McKenzie Avenue, the housing program and "to again tackle the three nasties of Saanich municipal affairs — garbage collection, garbage disposal and sewage."

He also hoped for more commercial zones to broaden the tax base and if this could be done through an industrial estate "so much the better." Plans are already being drawn for a light industrial zone at Royal Oak.

* * *

Three Burnaby councillors and several municipal officials from the mainland community visited Saanich this week for a review of the $700,000 low-rental housing scheme.

The unique scheme will see 50 older homes purchased in different parts of the municipality, rather than group the poor into one building which would soon become a ghetto.

Reeve Curtis said "it is rather nice to be of assistance to Burnaby" because that municipality had helped Saanich in the past, including the ice arena.

SHARP WARNS PROVINCES

Medicare Means 12.5 Per Cent Income Tax Hike

PRICE TAG $1 BILLION

OTTAWA (CP) — A full national medical care insurance program would cost the country an estimated $1,000,000,000, Finance Minister Sharp told reporters Friday.

The figure is based on all provinces joining the program. To pay its share of $500,000,000, Mr. Sharp said the government would have to raise funds equivalent to 12½ per cent of personal income taxes.

As an example, he said the federal government would have to raise an additional $12.50 for every $100 now paid in income taxes.

Mr. Sharp added quickly that of course the government has not yet decided what tax sources it will tap to pay for medical care insurance, and does not know how many provinces are prepared to go ahead with it next July 1.

But he reminded a press conference that he had already declared the federal cost of medical care insurance will be paid out of higher taxes, and not by borrowing.

The press conference was held at the conclusion of a two-day conference of provincial finance ministers, called to discuss anti-inflation measures, principally. Mr. Sharp said he was pleased with provincial offers of co-operation in trimming government spending.

Charles MacNaughton, Ontario treasurer, declined any comment on the meeting.

He referred reporters to Ontario's statement Thursday, which put medical care below education and housing on the province's priorities list. Ontario also urged a form of fiscal transfer or equivalent payment by the federal government for provinces passing up the federal scheme.

But medical care insurance was the No. 1 topic at the concluding session of the conference Friday.

Mr. Sharp said that in reply to a question he had told the meeting the insurance plan is not an anti-inflation measure. Quebec's finance minister, Paul Dozois, immediately told reporters this meant that medical care insurance will be inflationary.

The $1,000,000,000 estimate was prepared for the conference by the federal finance ministry, $500,000,000 to be borne by the provinces.

Mr. Sharp said he will take provincial representations on the plan to a federal cabinet meeting next Tuesday.

Prime Minister Pearson has been insisting in the Commons that the government has no plans to amend legislation already on the statute books. It calls for federal payments to start next July 1.

Greece, Turkey War Danger Kindled Again

NICOSIA (AP) — The danger of war between Greece and Turkey loomed up again this week as the Cyprus crisis, dormant for three years, suddenly blazed up in new fighting between Greek- and Turkish-Cypriots.

The 1964 fighting ended abruptly after Turkish air force jet fighters attacked Greek Cypriots, forcing them to accept a UN-sponsored ceasefire which lasted without any major breaches until Wednesday.

Despite the ceasefire, all subsequent efforts failed to reach a lasting settlement to the island's problems.

The Greek-Cypriot national guard of President Archbishop Makarios, fully equipped with tanks and artillery, controls more than nine-tenths of the island.

TURKS LACK ARMAMENT

The Turkish-Cypriot fighters, who lack armor and artillery, remain confined in heavily fortified positions in the Turkish sector's major towns and dozens of entirely Turkish villages scattered like pinpoints on the island map.

The 6,000-man UN peacekeeping force, drawn from many nations, including Canada, interposed itself between the rival sides in 1965 and has contributed to maintaining peace and settling localized points of difference.

But restrictions against it using force except in self-defence have made it ineffectual in preventing any large-scale military operation by either side.

It was such a major military operation, launched by the Greek-Cypriot side, that rekindled the crisis this week around the Turkish-Cypriot village of Kphinou.

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — United Nations Secretary-General U Thant says Turkey warned the UN to stop the battle on Cyprus last Wednesday or else the crisis would "go beyond the borders of the island."

Thant reported the warning to the Security Council Friday night and appealed to all concerned to help restore calm between Greeks and Turkish-Cypriots and avoid any "repetition of such senseless and deplorable incidents."

In Ankara, the Turkish parliament gave the government authority Friday to send troops anywhere abroad in case of "conflagration on Cyprus." They said the vote, in closed session, was 432 to 1 with two members abstaining.

Quebec to Shake Up House But Throne Speech Stays

ST. JOHNS, Que. (CP) — Premier Daniel Johnson has promised to push through "radical changes" in Quebec's legislative procedure.

"I want radical changes in the rules so that we can get rid of some archaic customs which no longer are relevant," he said in an interview Friday while attending the Union Nationale party's second annual secret caucus.

The premier, however, denied newspaper and radio reports that he plans to replace the lieutenant-governor in the reading of the speech from the throne when the legislature opens in January.

The speech traditionally is read by the lieutenant-governor at the opening of the provincial legislature.

"I am more interested in reforms that will update our archaic system to the 20th century," said Mr. Johnson.

The suggestion that the premier replace the lieutenant-governor was contained in a brief submitted by Union Nationale members to the bipartisan rules committee of the legislature.

Changes might also include the alteration of the legislative council—the 24-member appointed upper house—to make it an elected body.

The Union Nationale now has 14 life-appointed members of the legislative council and the Liberals have 10 members. The elected legislative assembly—or lower house—consists of 108 members.

Reports stated the speaker of the legislature no longer would wear a tricorn hat, white gloves and black gown, but would be permitted to wear a dark-colored suit with grey-striped trousers.

Mr. Johnson promised at a reception following the caucus that the Union Nationale party will be the people's party "as long as I am chief."

FEAR OF PEKING PLAYS BIG ROLE

Ho Caught in Russia-China Squeeze

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
(AP Special Correspondent)

A carefully-polite North Vietnamese rebuff to Moscow this week hints that Hanoi is uncomfortably in the middle of a Soviet-Chinese struggle for influence.

The development could indicate that fear of Peking plays an important role in Hanoi.

In connection with the celebration of the Bolshevik Revolution's 50th anniversary, the Supreme Soviet decreed the award of the Soviet Union's highest honor, the Order of Lenin, on Ho Chi Minh.

The decree said the award was in recognition, among other things, of President Ho's contributions to "the unity and solidarity of the Socialist camp and the international Communist movement."

The decree itself described Ho as a "staunch fighter for socialism and Soviet-Vietnamese friendship."

HO
. . . ticklish spot

If Ho accepted the award on those terms, it could be considered tantamount to an endorsement of Soviet leadership of international communism.

Hanoi quickly announced that Ho sent a reply to the Soviet party's central committee, telling of his "boundless emotion" on learning of the decree, but that in the circumstances of the Vietnam war, "my mind would not be at rest should I accept now the particularly great honor."

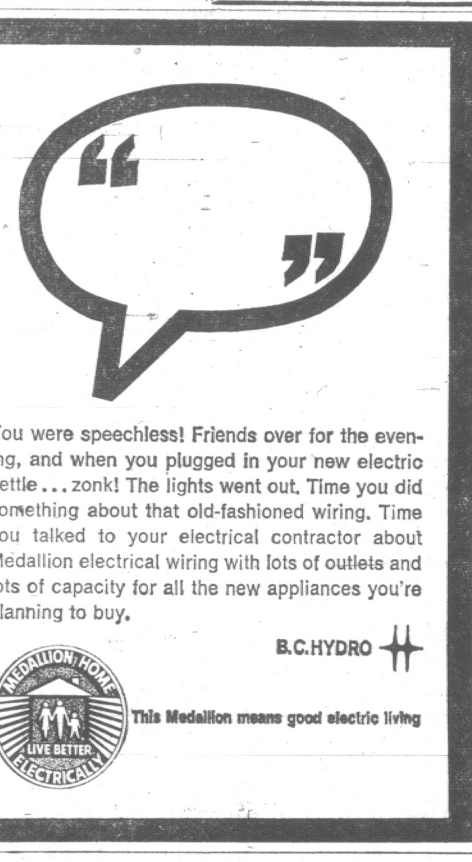
"For this reason," said the message, . . . I ask you to postpone the presentation . . . until the day our people have driven off the U.S. imperialist aggressors and completely liberated our fatherland."

SOFTENS REPLY

The florid prose softened a reply which otherwise could be considered a sharp rebuff. Hanoi is not in a position to affront Moscow, whence comes the bulk of North Vietnam's economic and military support.

But Ho's big neighbor, China, is looking on and likely would be irked should he accept an award from those Peking currently calls "revisionist renegades and scabs."

What Peking thinks is abundantly clear. For days the Chinese have been denouncing Soviet efforts to bring about a world Communist conference. They have accused the Soviet leadership of using the Bolshevik celebration as an excuse for calling "an anti-Communist, anti-China, anti-people counter-revolutionary sinister meeting of renegades and scabs" whose purpose would be to condemn China as the splitter of the movement.



You were speechless! Friends over for the evening, and when you plugged in your new electric kettle . . . zonk! The lights went out. Time you did something about that old-fashioned wiring. The Bargainers

WHILE ALL WAS SWEETNESS and light on the surface in the meetings this week between President Johnson and Japan's Premier Sato, the outlines of tough bargaining underneath can be seen. And there can be little doubt, in view of the joint communique following the meetings, that Mr. Johnson gave away far less than Mr. Sato and that the latter will be in political hot water back home as a result.

The Japanese Premier was persuaded to endorse positions which are highly unpopular with many of his people, including some in his own party. One of these was a statement condemning the "intransigent attitude" of the Chinese leadership, a position which Japan has carefully refrained from officially taking before, insisting rather on political neutrality with regard to China in order not to disrupt trade. By so incautiously allowing himself to be drawn into the Chinese-American quarrel, Mr. Sato will have made himself very unpopular with both the powerful industrial interests and the socialist and pacifist elements in Japan.

Mr. Sato also committed to paper a cautious position on Vietnam and the bombing of the North which, while ambiguous and far from giving full support to the United States, goes further than many Japanese desire. Additionally, he gave a vague undertaking to increase his country's interest in Asian defence matters, which will draw strong fire from the Japanese left, and made new promises of increased aid to developing nations, which is strongly opposed by the finance ministry and by powerful private financial interests.

For all this, Mr. Sato was given a commitment that the Bonins, a small scattering of islets due south of Tokyo, would be returned by the United States. But he was obviously turned down flat on the issue dearest to Japanese hearts, the return of the Ryukyu Islands, including Okinawa, and there was no mention in the communique of even the concession that the Okinawans would gain any measure of autonomy in their local politics, which they have been demanding.

The reaction in Japan has been swift and ominous. Opposition party leaders have announced that they will encourage passive resistance to American rule in the Ryukyus while trade union leaders are considering a program of harassment at the numerous American military and naval bases in Japan and on Okinawa. The attempt by the United States to convert Japan into a staunch and straightforward ally in Asia could result in the downfall of the already weak Sato government, which could lead in turn to dangerous political instability in Japan.

Almost Within Reach

THE UNITED APPEAL OF THE Comunity Chest and Red Cross has reached a most gratifying total less than ten per cent short of the $600,000 objective. That is much too close to success to permit failure, and the campaign should be continued in one form or another until the last few dollars can be collected.

More than the money needed for these very worthy social agencies is involved. The campaign objective is a pared total, reduced from the sum of original agency requests to the lowest level at which the work can be adequately carried out in the coming year. But also involved in the current campaign is the principle of the once-a-year united appeal.

For the first time, the Red Cross Society has combined its collection efforts with those of the Community Chest's 23 agencies and it is essential that this unification of appeals should be demonstrated as a success. Numerous polls over the years have shown that the Greater Victoria public prefers the policy of gathering all campaigns for local welfare, health and recreational activities into a single annual appeal. The only way in which to ensure that this method continues is to show that it works—that the people of this community will fully support a combined annual drive for funds.

That goal is now almost within our grasp. A relatively small push will ensure success. Let's give it.

Out of Proportion

IT IS UNFORTUNATE THAT IN apparent conformity with some political aim of the moment, the Soviet Union has added to its expected protest against the recent demonstration against its embassy in Ottawa an accusation that the attack had the "obvious connivance of Canadian official authorities." Such a charge is ridiculous and has rightly been rejected by External Affairs Minister Martin.

It is true that some violence by the demonstrators which involved throwing rocks and paint should have been more quickly halted by the police. But the unfortunate affair brought an official apology and has been roundly condemned by Canadian public and government alike.

Indeed, much of the demonstrators' ire was directed against official Canadian representatives who were entering the Russian embassy for an anniversary reception.

These facts must be as well known to the Russians as they are to Canadians. It is a pity that a minor disturbance by a crowd reported to be composed mainly of new Canadians who had suffered from Russian policies in Europe, should be elevated for some obscure political purpose into a major international affront involving official "connivance." The Soviet action is an unfortunate development in Russo-Canadian relations. It should not be allowed to create more than a temporary disturbance of otherwise peaceful waters.

Bringing the Point Home

ANNOUNCEMENT IN WASHington this week of 10 potential sites as part of the "thin missile" defence system, brings the problem of their possible employment very close to home. One of the potential sites is Seattle. One of the possible defence missiles, the type called a "Sprint," has a range which could place contact between it and an incoming nuclear missile in the proximity of this city.

Canadians have long known that any trans-polar missile attack between the two super-powers—and interception of the weapons in flight—could have disastrous effects on this country. The most recent report from Washington serves to emphasize the point in this locality and to strengthen support of continuing Canadian efforts to avoid such a clash. The position of Victoria as part of the filling in the geographic sandwich is far from comforting.

"... we'll, I'm sorry, Ma'am, but this ketchup has just gone up three cents ... I've GOT to put the new ..."

Letters

Thanks

The members of the Victoria M. S. Golden Key wish to extend their grateful thanks to all the kind friends who contributed to the success of the bazaar held on November 8 at the Britannia Branch of the Royal Canadian Legion.

We would especially like to thank this newspaper, television and the radio stations for their part in bringing to the public's attention our fund-raising efforts and the purpose for them.

To our convenors, those in charge of the various booths and all who served in so many ways, our deep appreciation for helping us to realize a sum of money to help the society's patient-aid program.—(Mrs.) Catherine Laurie, Executive Secretary.

Out-of-Date Concept

Governor-General Mitchener declared a school holiday on the occasion of his official visit to Alberta.

This idea of considering schools a form of prison and giving an amnesty to prisoners is a pernicious out-of-date concept. We have made education in Canada a right — not a privilege — and even enforced this rule. Elsewhere in the world people are fighting for free and equal education because they realize that free schooling has been a hard-won privilege.

The idea of giving school "holidays" on so-called great occasions should be discontinued once and for all.—John L. Rimmington, 3372 Henderson.

FROM QUEBEC CITY — By STAN McDOWELL

Can Canada Effect a Curative 'Quiet Revolution?'

REVERSING the tide running toward independence in Quebec would amount to a quiet revolution in the whole of Canada. Unless French Canadians can be on an equal footing in competition with English-speaking Canadians, Pierre Trudeau, now federal justice minister, wrote in 1965, "a state-of-siege mentality will develop among us and we will fall back on Quebec where we can best stand up to such a siege.

McDowell

"In other words, French Canadians are in danger of being led by English-Canadian 'nationalism' to make Quebec evolve toward the position of a national state and — sooner or later — independence."

This state-of-siege mentality now exists among the leaders of Quebec nationalism, including the present provincial government and some — but not all — members of the government that preceded it.

It amounts to a conviction that the French-speaking society of Quebec must, if it hopes to survive and flourish, take the running of its own affairs entirely into its own hands. It cannot afford to have matters vital to its welfare afministered by a government in which its voice is that of a numerical minority.

In the past, when the land, the language, the civil law and the faith were considered the only vital matters, this sort of separatism could be maintained by building a society around the church, from the parish up.

Today, in the age of economic planning, this belief implies that Quebec must be, to all intents and purposes, a sovereign state.

A Canadian quiet revolution to bring Quebec into Canada to stay would have to involve the abandonment by Quebec of this state-or-siege mentality.

That means the rest of Canada would have to call off the siege.

For the siege is still on.

It is still impossible for a French Canadian to move out of Quebec with any reasonable hope that his children will be able to carry on their education in French.

The problem is not only that they may lose some mastery of the language of their fathers. They are also faced with the devastating experience of being obliged to do difficult mental work in an unfamiliar language. The high rate of high school dropouts among the French-speaking in Ontario is easily explained.

Step Forward

The passage of Bill 59 in Manitoba, making it possible for half the day's classes to be conducted in French, is a big step forward for the French language. But the French-speaking child who moved from Quebec to Manitoba would still be under a severe handicap.

In contrast, the English-speaking child in Quebec City, where the English-speaking are only about four per cent of the population, can go to schools so English that he will never learn to speak adequate French, unless he picks it up outside school hours.

In Ontario, despite the announced intentions of Premier Robarts to provide high schools for the French-speaking, the concrete efforts of the Ottawa collegiate institute board actually to build a French high school have run into years of frustration.

This same one-way bilingualism — effective, working rights and opportunities for the English-speaking in Quebec but nothing comparable for the French-speaking outside Quebec — applies in many other fields as well.

There is English television in Quebec City but no French television in Toronto. Getting even French radio into Toronto caused a panic.

Painful Slowness

Road signs, legislatures, courts and public services are for the most part bilingual in Quebec but strictly English in the other provinces. Even in the federal civil service, bilingualism is progressing with what seems, at least when viewed from east of the Ottawa River, to be painful slowness.

"What does English Canada really want?" Federal Forestry Minister Maurice Sauve asked recently.

It is a fair question.

English-Canada has been asking, innocently or not, "What does Quebec want?"

Quebec's people find the question unfair. How can they answer, they want to know, until they know what choice they have.

An independent state of Quebec is one clear possibility. But the price is uncertain and most believe it would be high.

What many in Quebec want to know is whether there is any real alternative. If they choose a Canada in which they would enjoy genuine linguistic and cultural equality, have they any hope of getting it? Or will they have abandoned the goal of independence only to find, too late, that it was the only way to survive?

The state-of-siege mentality now driving Quebec toward separate statehood cannot be abandoned unless English Canada answers these questions convincingly enough to overcome the scepticism that French Canadians could not help acquiring from experiences of the past.

Premier Robarts' Confederation of Tomorrow conference in Toronto later this month will give Quebec some clues to what English Canada really wants: one bilingual country or two unilingual ones.

There is every evidence that the present government of Quebec is close to having made up its mind that, no matter what English Canada may now want, Quebec wants national statehood.

But there is not proof yet that the majority of the population of Quebec is committed to this cause.

Nothing Decided

Many astute observers of Quebec believe that, although the evolution runs in that direction, no bridges have been burned yet and nothing decided for keeps.

There is still reason to believe that the governments of the other provinces have it in their power to influence the choice Quebec's people will ultimately make.

They can encourage Quebec independence by appearing to give their blessing to the autonomist aims of the Quebec government.

Or they can challenge these aims by confronting Quebec's people with the clear necessity to make a choice between Canada and independence — and proving that the rest of the country is ready to undertake the revolution that would make Canada the more appealing alternative.

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — By WILLIAM R. FRYE

Russia Replaces Britain in the Middle East

WHILE much of the world focuses on Arab-Jewish tensions, profound changes are quietly taking place elsewhere in the Middle East, drastically altering the power landscape in the area. Three major transformations stand out. British influence, once predominant, is virtually at an end; Egyptian imperialism is also a fading phenomenon; The Soviet Union is rapidly moving in to fill the vacuum.

Frye

Britain once had virtually unchallenged sway over much of the Middle East. Palestine, Jordan, Egypt, the Sudan and fringes of the Arabian peninsula were all part of her domain.

That imperial era finally came to an end this week with an announcement in Parliament that British forces would complete by Nov. 30 their withdrawal from Aden, Britain's "little Vietnam" — the last British base of significance in the Arab world Aden will then become independent.

What will replace British power is not primarily FLOSY (the Front for Liberation of South Yemen), a vehicle for Egyptian influence, but the BLF (National Liberation Front), a group of nationalists further to the left who began as Nasserites but turned toward Moscow.

Kremlin's Bouquet

Thus the departure of Britain is not a gain for U.A.R. President Gamel Abdel Nasser. It is a bouquet for the Kremlin.

Simultaneously, Egyptian influence has been diluted, if not eliminated, in Yemen, long a major objective for Nasser. On Nov. 5, an all-out Nasser man, Abdulla al-Salal, was ousted as president in a bloodless coup and replaced by a more moderate nationalist, Abdul Rahman al-Iryani.

Al-Iryani promptly sought out rebellious, pro-Saudi Arabian royalist leaders to arrange a cease-fire in the five-year-old Yemeni civil war.

Nasser may well have facilitated the overthrow of al-Salal in payment to Saudi Arabia for help in cushioning Egypt's defeat in the June war with Israel. Al-Iryani and his aides were freed from Cairo arrest a short time before the coup.

If so, this does not change the fact that the coup was a setback for Nasser's empire-building. It merely means that the dilution of Egyptian influence in Yemen was a voluntary act of renunciation, undertaken in return for value received.

Meanwhile the growth of Soviet influence is apparent on every hand.

The Soviet fleet in the Mediterranean has been augmented until today it numbers between 45 and 55 ships. These vessels, including submarines and guided-missile cruisers, are deployed from Oran, Algeria, near the Straits of Gibraltar, to Alexandria and Port Said, Egypt, at the northern end of the Suez Canal.

The Paris newspaper Figaro quotes intelligence sources as estimating that more than 1,000 Soviet officers, including four generals, are helping rebuild the Egyptian army.

The Christian Science Monitor reports that 1,000 Soviet technicians are in Algeria, training a 100,000-man army and giving other assistance.

Syria has long been deeply in the Soviet camp, though not necessarily a disciplined satellite. Iraq has drifted much closer to Moscow since the June war. The Sudan is negotiating for Soviet MiGs and tanks.

What all this means is that as Lt. Gen. Sir John B. Glubb, the storied "Glubb Pasha" of Jordan's Arab Legion, pointed out in the Monitor this past week, the Soviet Union — like Czarist Russia of the 19th Century—is manoeuvring itself into a position to control Europe's traditional trade routes to the East and thus gain important leverage over the European continent.

In the age of the supertanker and the atom-powered merchant vessel, Suez is no longer the critical gateway it was in the days of the Czars and Napoleon. So long as Turkey and Iran remain friendly, Europe's air lanes to the Far East cannot be choked off.

But a Soviet presence in the Mideast, deeply enough established, could disrupt Europe's supply of oil, outflank NATO, imperil Turkey and the Dardanelles, render at least uncomfortable the posture of the American Sixth Fleet, hasten the dissolution of American bases in North Africa, and give Moscow a bridgehead from which to expand southward into central and east Africa.

Bargaining Position

It would also provide the Soviet Union with a formidable bargaining position from which to deal with Washington on Vietnam.

To say that all this has happened would be at least premature.

Many Arabs are irritated with Moscow for failure to give them more meaningful military and diplomatic support last summer. The United States, while unpopular in much of the Arab world because of its alignment with Israel, retains significant influence in Jordan, Tunisia, Morocco and even in Egypt.

But meaningful Soviet penetration of the Mideast is a very real threat. As British and Egyptian influence fades, the Kremlin is busily replacing it.

The one dramatic remedy available — the one sure way to change the power equation for the better — would be to bring about an Arab-Israeli detente, reducing the Arab's need for Soviet "aid." This is one reason why UN efforts to east Mideast tensions have had such high priority in Washington.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

As you hike along a forest trail, stop and look at some of the old "nurse logs." How many different species of plants can you find?

A nurse log is a tree that has fallen and has been lying on the ground for very many years, perhaps up to 100.

All species of trees have different periods of time until they are gradually absorbed and returned into the soil by other living things.

This process of decomposition and decay starts with minute fungi, algae, slime mould, and moss spores landing on the new-fallen log.

All these plants begin to grow and so the regeneration of a forest starts.

At the same time, bark beetles, ambrosia beetles begin to burrow into the cambium and the wood to lay their eggs and deposit more fungus spores. Soon after follow the termites, carpenter ants, and some of the larger wood-boring beetles, each adding to the "breaking-down."

Woodpeckers tear large chunks out of the log in search of these grubs. Other small insect-eating birds will search among the cracks and their droppings will add to the process.

Soon enough soil and decaying matter has accumulated to support ferns. Shrubs and trees finally take a hold. Their roots, penetrating deep into the old log and down to the ground, set up a network of fibres and roots each in search of minerals and other material.

Different types of environment will reveal a different process in the stages of breaking down.

Dow Chemical on the Campus

By MAURICE FORD

On November 29 representatives of Dow Chemical Company of Canada, subsidiary of the United States firm which manufactures napalm being used in the Vietnam War, will be at the University of Victoria to interview promising students as possible future company employees. Student leaders here have indicated they will follow the example of some students at the University of British Columbia and protest the presence of the Dow recruiters on campus.

In the United States demonstrations against Dow at several universities have been bitter and bloody. The potential for trouble was present at Harvard last month but fortunately events ended peacefully. In the following article a teaching fellow and assistant senior tutor at Harvard discusses the issue and the principle involved.

Dow Chemical has many diversified interests, but students are concerned with only .5 per cent of its business.

Dow is the principal supplier to the United States military of napalm—a jelly-like substance that defoliates human beings as well as trees.

Seventy students were injured by riot trained police and 13 expelled at the University of Wisconsin when they locked arms to prevent interviews with Dow.

A sleep-in was staged against Dow on the carpeted floor of the plush Regents Room of the University of Minnesota. Students at the University of Illinois kept a Dow recruiter isolated in a room for five hours.

On October 25, it was Harvard's turn when Dr. Frederick Leavitt, Dow's interviewer, was imprisoned for seven hours by 300 Harvard and Radcliffe students jamming the corridors of Mallinckrodt Chemical Laboratories, while others picketed outside with signs reading "Dow Shalt Not Kill" and "Napalm—Johnson's Baby Powder."

Kidnapping

The Dean of Harvard College, Fred Glimp, urged the obstructors to leave, intimating they might be guilty of kidnaping, until a more legally astute demonstrator pointed out an essential element of that crime was "secreting a person in a place where no one knew where to find him," which caused all to break out in laughter.

This was a good-humored, responsible crowd, not the often violent mob which had confronted Secretary of Defence McNamara a year ago.

Harvard deans and faculty members (among them Louis Fieser, the inventor of napalm) were allowed to go to and from the interview room at will.

Dow's Dr. Leavitt was encouraged to address the crowd, and he explained that the aspect of the business for which he sought recruits had nothing to do with napalm, but the students were unwilling to accept this nice distinction. For them, Dow Chemical—and Harvard for inviting Dow—were co-partners with the Johnson Administration in genocide. They refused to permit Dr. Leavitt to leave until he had signed a statement commiting Dow never to darken Harvard's doors again.

Is recruiting but one branch of freedom of speech, or an activity essentially more invidious?

The leaders of the Harvard protest had no objection to Dow hiring a university lecture hall and expounding on the efficacy of napalm as a means of concluding the war—as it has done uncritically in a recent press release: "The United States is involved in Vietnam. As long as we are involved, we believe in fulfilling our responsibility to this national commitment of a democratic society. And we do this because we believe in the long-term goals of our country."

But recruiting was something different. Dow Chemical had chosen to profit from one of the more hideous aspects of the war and was inducing students, for a share of that financial gain, to sell a very meaningful part of themselves.

Neil Rudenstine, a popular assistant professor of English, recalled that, not so many years ago when he had been a senior at Princeton, considerable McCarthyite opposition had been expressed to the appearance of Alger Hiss. Yet at the insistence of a number of students probably not much larger than those seeking interviews with Dow, Hiss had been permitted to speak.

Did today's liberals wish to adopt the repressive techniques of yesteryear?

Rudenstine then considered the role of the university in the modern world. If a university really cared about the ideas put forth in its academic and professional schools, did it not have a duty to facilitate the translation of those ideas into action in the real world, and did not a placement office constitute an important nexus with that world?

Full Spectrum

Moreover, should not the corporations, law firms and colleges seeking teachers (all of which use the recruitment office) represent a spectrum commensurate with the university's own emphasis on diversity of ideas?

Rudenstine's rhetorical questions caused the focus of opinion to shift.

The students reacted in a manner not unlike that of the crowds in Shakespeare's Roman plays (which Rudenstine teaches) after an Antony has moved them. Instead of concentrating on Dow and the war, the protest began to centre on the aspect that touched most nearly to home—Harvard's complicity.

The demonstrators voted to place the issue of making ethical distinctions among potential recruiters squarely on the Harvard faculty (which has promised to debate the matter). Then, realizing that Dr. Leavitt was without power to commit Dow permanently and that no agreement made by anyone under duress would be binding, they released him.

Student Pickets at the University of Waterloo, Kitchener, Ont.

With the freeing of the "hostage," the prospect of police action and violence was averted.

That evening the demonstrators reassembled and, in an orderly meeting, specifically requested the university to withdraw permission to interview from the Central Intelligence Agency, the Army and the Navy, all due on campus shortly.

Given the buildup of recent events, that the Dow sit-in did not erupt into violence bordered on the miraculous.

Tear gas and clubs had been used to break up the demonstration at Wisconsin. Just the Saturday before, students in the front ranks at the Pentagon had been beaten by MP's rifle butts to an extent far greater than that reported by The New York Times.

Excitement

Furthermore, for most young people, there is a certain very real excitement in being able to say you were there "when the cops came," and to show the bruises and the bravery.

At first the Harvard demonstrations boded to be like many of the others, with a fair amount of self-justifying (or aggrandizing) martyrdom. The students had voted not to leave, no matter how many police arrived to drag them away. Experienced demonstrators had sent out the word to remove all ties and earrings.

Yet, albeit sitting-in to dramatize their cause, these demonstrators had presented their grievances very rationally. Michael Ansara, 68, a former president of Students for a Democratic Society, had argued, by and large, coolly and persuasively. After deans, young faculty and fellow students had urged that holding a powerless man hostage might only hurt the movement, the demonstrators reversed themselves.

Although unbeaten Harvard and Dartmouth clashed in football this past weekend, almost all student concern in Cambridge has focused on the consequences of the Dow confrontation.

Do recruiters fulfill an "academic" function sufficient to outweigh whatever moral ills their businesses are heir to? What punishment should be meted out to students driven by a desperate war to perhaps desperate acts?

Universities traditionally cherish the notion that veritas can only follow the free expression of all ideas. Although these demonstrators might rejoice at the exclusion of Dow and the CIA, would they really want to establish the precedent of ceding the university authority to decide other "moral" matters?

And yet moral judgements are already being made by universities in many areas. Almost all colleges impose restrictions on dating in their buildings; should not ethical evaluations be made in the more fundamental area of war?

Faculties themselves are confused as to whether these demonstrations "really" are symbolic protests against the war or blatant assertions of the principle of student power (perhaps long overdue, when we consider the experience of Latin American countries).

The questions posed by the Harvard protest against Dow apply to many universities. The dialogue is still continuing as university officials, conscious that the right to dissent is neither easy to exercise nor to administer, try to work out an appropriate solution.

Will the Liberals Seek A New Political Niche?

By PETER C. NEWMAN

OTTAWA — The displacement of a prime minister by his successor is always a dismal political enterprise — wasteful, crude and unjust.

But despite the very real affection which exists for Lester Pearson within the Liberal party, there are moves afoot to hurry his exit. While no date for his retirement announcement has been set, the season of his leaving is expected to be the spring of 1968.

Senior Liberals are recognizing the fact that Mike Pearson is the victim of a confluence of frictions — political, social and economic — that have suddenly blown up to test his leadership, and found him wanting. "Every day that goes by in which Mr. Pearson shows no evidence of either wanting or being able to take charge, makes more and more Liberals impatient with him," says one of the party's senior power brokers.

Newman

"Sure, there's a great backlog of love and respect for the man, but it's wearing off rapidly and if he doesn't go soon, we aren't going to have much of a party left to work with after he goes," he added.

The Pearson administration still retains all of the outward manifestations of a government in charge of events. It is moving ahead in several vital areas.

As well as the long-overdue CBC appointments, there will soon be announced the names of new men to head Air Canada and the National Capital Commission. A favorable recommendation on Canada's participation in the satellite television is due out of cabinet in the near future. There's an important housing conference planned for later this month and the first federal-provincial meeting on the constitution will be held in January, 1968.

But the essential element of political leadership seems to be missing. The big change, of course, is that with Robert Stanfield's entry into the Commons, the vague threat of an alternative government has been transformed into a daily reality.

New Rules

The rules of the game have changed, and Lester Pearson has lost his political immunity.

The other factor which is increasingly immobilizing the Liberal government is the open jockeying for position and power within the cabinet among Pearson's potential successors. The primary concern of Mitchell Sharp, Paul Martin, Paul Hellyer and John Turner seems to have become the forthcoming leadership race.

How they'll rank when the race actually begins is difficult to predict, because the current situation is totally different from the tradition of previous Liberal leadership turnovers.

Except for the great aberration of 1919 which threw up Mackenzie King in what turned out to be a wide open convention, the captaincy of the Liberal party has always been passed on almost like a hereditary title. The party establishment picked the man, then called a convention to anoint its choice.

Not Agreed

But partly because of the nature of Pearson's stewardship and because even the Liberal party has had to recognize that Canadian society is no longer a closed shop, the Liberal establishment has lost much of its prerogative. Its membership has become more numerous and less homogeneous. It's far from certain that it could agree on an heir-apparent to Pearson, and even if it did so, be able to hand him the crown.

A counter-trend is therefore establishing itself in the party which claims that the power of the Liberal establishment must be broken and that new anti-establishment figures should be introduced into the race.

Could Lose

In its present mood, the Liberal establishment would rather lose the next election with one of its own, than attempt the kind of major revision in the party's power structure that would allow the holding of an unpredictable leadership convention.

It's in this context that the views of Walter Gordon and his few remaining supporters become valid. Although Gordon himself quite readily admits that he retains little if any significant leverage within party councils, he makes the argument that there's really no point in having two Conservative parties in this country, so that if the Liberals want to differentiate themselves from Stanfield's Tories they'll have to find a new place in the political spectrum.

Lester Pearson's ideological driving force consisted mainly of a general reformist's urge to complete the welfare state begun by his predecessors and a vital personal commitment to work hard on behalf of national unity. These commendable goals are no longer specific or strong enough to base a platform on which the Liberal party can demand a majority mandate from the electorate.

New Objectives

The new leader, through the force of his personality and his own sense of priorities, will have to crystallize in the national conscience a whole new set of objectives. They will have to spring from "small l" Liberal principles, adapted to the problems of contemporary urban society.

They will need to minimize the hazards and expand the opportunities that an unpredictable future will present to the Canadian people.

The new Liberal leader, whoever he turns out to be, will have to move hard and fast on a number of fronts. His main assignment will be to find a way out of the current "end of ideology" situation which has drained Canada's democratic process of the vitality that flows from the controversy over great political issues.

NEWS HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK

Reviewed by Peter Murray, Times Wire News Editor

Britain's economic troubles took another turn for the worse this week.

Disclosure of a big trading deficit during the month of October was coupled with reports that the Labor government has been forced to seek help abroad to prevent devaluation of the pound.

A group of 11 countries is expected to make a loan of about $1 billion to Britain in order that she can repay an earlier debt to the International Monetary Fund. This new loan would be of medium term, probably three years.

The IMF loan was made during the last major sterling crisis of 1964-65. The government had hoped to repay it through a buildup of cash reserves, but the drain on the treasury has continued.

Imports are up and exports down as the recent dock strike contributed to the trade imbalance.

An increase in Britain's bank rate from 6 to 6½ per cent has not attracted the new capital that had been hoped.

At week's end the spate of rumors and gloomy reports tumbled values on the London Stock Exchange and brought new pressure on the pound with foreign selling.

The domestic ramifications of the situation spell more woes for Prime Minister Harold Wilson. In order to meet the repayment terms of the new loan it is expected he will be compelled to impose new restrictions.

Some predicted a cutback in welfare benefits or quotas on the import of luxury goods. Either way ordinary Britons are bound to feel the pinch.

●

The new crisis also adds to Britain's difficulties in winning admission to the European Common Market.

Lack of stability of the pound has been one of the main French objections to British membership. The chief U.K. ECM negotiator, Lord Chalfont, attempted to allay these fears during the week by declaring in Paris that Britain had no intention of devaluing the pound.

Mr. Wilson took another tack in a Monday night speech, playing on European continental concern about the extent of penetration by big U.S. corporations.

He put forward a plan for an industrial pool to fight "American plunder" of European industry and the threat of U.S. domination. The plan was obviously designed to appeal to President Charles de Gaulle who has frequently spoken out on this subject.

However because Wilson tied his offer to Common Market negotiations it is unlikely to make much headway for some time.

●

There was still no breakthrough on the Middle East in frantic United Nations discussions which raced a weekend deadline. It is expected now that the Arabs and their supporters will press for a vote in the General Assembly on a resolution which is unacceptable to Israel and could lead to more violence.

●

President Johnson held another of his top-level conferences on the Vietnam war and indicated there is little chance of a prolonged bombing pause during the year-end holiday period in an attempt to bring about peace negotiations.

As U.S. troops in Vietnam reached the 470,000 mark — equalling the peak figure during the Korean war in 1953 — Gen. William Westmoreland declared "we are really making progress over there."

At home, former child movie star Shirley Temple, a Vietnam 'hawk', was defeated in a California congressional vote by another Republican who advocates American disengagement from the war.

In a bizarre postscript to the latest Congo fighting, 111 captured white mercenaries from 10 different countries were forced to sign a pledge before being freed that they will never fight in Africa again.

Cutting Down Lush Growth To Regain a Forgotten View

By ART STOTT

At some cost in anguish, we have removed the once lovely double-flowering cherry which decorated the slope at the foot of the lawn. It had grown too big, too dominating. Much as sentiment argued for its retention, commonsense dictated its elimination.

Stoft

Now we have a sweeping view of the bay and the Strait that we had forgotten once the cherry had created its all but impenetrable screen. On balance, we have gained by the tree-cutting operation, though it hurt at the time.

There is a certain symbolism in the experience for me — symbolism which came through as I listened Wednesday evening to Sheila Egoff discuss children's literature at an event highlighting Young Canada's Book Week here. Sheila cut away a lot of obstructing brush for me and restored a vista hidden too long by intervening preoccupations. This was an added bonus beyond the enjoyment of listening to someone who knew what she was talking about.

She left me with the renewed conviction — to which many of us give lip-service and then dismiss — that most children actually are normal; reasonably healthy, reasonably intelligent, reasonably happy and certainly entitled to a good story when they read.

★ ★ ★

We know this, of course, and say it, then we devote our time, interest and attention almost overwhelmingly to the abnormal. Frequently we assume that the majority of children have the capacities to develop and enjoy themselves without a great deal of help from adults who concentrate on the minority with problems. This is an acceptable procedure in any do-gooder philosophy, but it tends to permit neglect of the normal, who might be given even happier lives if we granted them more of our concern and attention.

The other viewpoint Miss Egoff made for me as she talked of children's books, old and new, was that some of the old were pretty good. In the tricky currents of change, it seems to me, we have been giving so much thought to the new that our preoccupation has left us inclined to accept the idea that anything old should be tossed in the ashcan or stuffed in the rag-bag.

Miss Egoff is a pro in children's library work. She also has critical faculties which haven't been worn smooth by the rolling flow of present day rivers of persuasion. She does not take the position that all of the old stories for children were good. Far from it. She reminded her audience of that period of highly moral precepts when the central child in a typical piece of juvenile fiction died sweetly passive somewhere between age three and age five, with its last words a plea to parents to mend their ways and be good. If you're familiar with the genre, you realize how much an earlier generation needed UNICEF or the SPCA, depending on how you feel about children.

But some of the oldies were good — and Sheila pointed out that to any child a story it hasn't been told or read is new no matter what vintage.

Today, she said, more children's books from all parts of the world are coming off the presses than even the reviewer can get around to reading. Some of them are excellent. What bothered her was the amount of trash being turned out — the adaptation of the slick and the stultifying to the money-making business of serving the infants' market.

She read excerpts from what she called "slice of life" novels for children, wondering if they were inspired by "Catcher in the Rye" but defining the basic difference between the latter and its contemporaries. The difference? Salinger can write.

She splashed a sharp dash of vinegar on juveniles endorsed by so-called educational agencies with "controlled vocabularies" (Don't challenge the child to learn new words, dull his appreciation with the monotonous repetition of the ones he knows.)

A lot of weed-growth of modern conventionalism had been brushed out for me when the talk was completed. The view was broader, I could see more clearly that what's old isn't necessarily bad and to be discarded because it's old; what's new isn't necessarily good and to be embraced only because it is new; and most youngsters should be directed to the normal enjoyment of what's good whatever a story's birth date may be.

TIPS FOR HOME GARDENERS

Give Your Favorite Conifer a Haircut!

By JACK BEASTALL

Ornamental conifers have been used extensively in foundation plantings over the last 25 years.

These plants, frequently referred to as "little evergreen shrubs," include the popular Chamaecyparis lawsoniana, or Lawson's false-cypress, of which the varieties Elwoodi, Fletcheri and Alumi are a few that have become household names.

Because these trees are readily available to the home gardener in small sizes at reasonable prices, they have been planted indiscriminately with no thought to ultimate height or width.

Jack

The results of bad placement some 10 or 15 years ago is evident today. We see entrance steps almost overgrown, windows blocked and views obstructed, and there is a steady flow of requests for assistance in controlling these plants that were intended for ornament but are now a nuisance.

WHY NOT CONIFERS?

The first thought of the home gardener confronted with these problems is to do some pruning. We prune fruit trees and flowering shrubs to keep them within bounds, so why not prune conifers?

Many plantings of coniferous evergreens have been ruined by a home gardener with a pruning mania, those who believe every tree and shrub must have a "hair cut" if for no other reason than to convince the neighbors of superior gardening knowledge.

Thus an artificial and monotonous picture is created, and the beauty of the conifers is ruined because they are no longer growing as nature intended.

There is one stark fact we have to face; no amount of pruning will ever correct the mistake of planting a conifer in the wrong location.

ONLY REMEDY

The only remedy which will give lasting satisfaction is to remove the offending conifer and replace it with a shrub that will remain in keeping with the available space and never become an annoyance.

This does not mean that conifers cannot be pruned, but pruning of conifers is nothing like pruning as applied to fruit trees and shrubs. The growth characteristics, the kind of foliage, and the form of branching precludes the methods used on deciduous, or leaf-losing plants.

The art of pruning conifers is not an easy subject to explain, neither is it one on which all authorities agree. It is, in effect, a reasonable middle course between the hideous "hair cut" and total neglect.

DANGEROUS

Any rules for conifer pruning are dangerous unless tempered by delicate judgment on the part of the person doing the pruning, a fact readily apparent when we realize that no two trees are alike. Some have a natural conical habit while others are columnar, some globular and some prostrate.

It shows a complete lack of knowledge to attempt to prune a conifer into a shape far removed from its natural habit. A Norway spruce cannot be made ball-shaped, nor an Irish Yew trained into a broad pyramid.

When applied to conifers we must always consider the art of pruning as a corrective operation, not a creative one.

The method of pruning is quite different for various families of conifers, some of which have a compact soft foliage while others have stiff branches and a well-defined central stem and branching habit.

SOFT FOLIAGE

Those with soft foliage (Elwoods, Fletchers, for example) are trimmed with a razor sharp pruning knife and an upward freehand movement which follows natural contours and removes only the foliage which contributes to a ragged outline.

Pruning shears and secateurs are not used for this work.

When plants are trimmed in this manner every spring and late summer from the year of planting their size is definitely controlled and their natural habit enhanced.

Pruning time for most specimen conifers and coniferous plants used for hedges is approximately the end of April and again in September, the periods immediately prior to making of new growth which quickly covers the scars.

The pruning of pines, firs and spruces follows a method in keeping with their branching habit, and is confined chiefly to correcting defects of growth and encouraging compactness.

Conifers which grow with a distinct main stem, or trunk, are completely disfigured when the top, or leader, is removed.

CANDLE-LIKE FORM

The Mugho pines make new growths of candle-like form some two to six inches in length. Pruning on these consists of removing about two-thirds of each "candle" with a sharp pruning knife. This produces a beautiful compact plant.

Upright junipers may have a slight trimming of the tops if necessary, and a judicious shortening of any side branch that tends to grow too fast and throw the tree out of balance.

On prostrate junipers the lowest branches will have the greatest spread and often extend beyond the desired area. Under these circumstances it is best to remove the entire branch, cutting well back beneath the second layer of branches. No trimming is desirable on prostrate plants.

It is worth remembering, when planting the popular prostrate Pfitzer's junipers in different color forms, that a 10 to 15-foot spread is considered a good specimen, so give them lots of room.

MOLDING 'COMPLETES' LOOK

By PAULINE GRAVES

Everyone likes the neat appearance of a television set built into a wall, but two factors, heat dissipation and accessibility for repairs must be considered. Plenty of space around the set allows the heat to dissipate and permits the set to be serviced easily, but usually you lose the built-in look.

One homeowner solved the problem by leaving an ample opening 43" wide by 36" high and 34" deep for a 21"x22"x-20" television set. To hide the open space around the set, a frame 5" at the top, 7½" on each side and 14" at the bottom, snaps firmly into the wall.

Mesh insets backed by open weave fabric let the air circulate. Molding across the bottom helps the built-in look.

So that the frame could be seen as a separate entity, we pulled it a few inches away from the opening.

Inside the opening, a low platform, the depth and width of the set, and 9" high, made of 1" plywood and 2"x4"s, with heavy duty casters, holds the television. When repairs are a "must", the frame comes off the wall and the set is rolled into the room. A guide, consisting of a 2"x 4" mounted on 1" plywood and nailed to the floor in the centre of the opening, positions the platform accurately and holds it in place. The 1"x2"s on the bottom of the platform create a groove that fits over the 2"x4" guide, similar to a drawer guide.

Cupboards directly above the television complete this home entertainment area, with radio, record player and speakers on the top shelves.

Easy-Care Homes Feature Low-Maintenance Windows

One of the most dramatic examples of the trend toward easy-care homes is the low-maintenance window.

New ideas and developments in the design and manufacture of windows have eased, and in some cases eliminated, certain chores associated with window upkeep, such as washing, puttying and painting windows and changing and maintaining storm sash.

Examples of these advances include:

1. Removable grilles. Removable vinyl grilles give the smallpane appearance of divided lights to a large expanse of glass. When the grilles are removed, the window can be cleaned as a single pane of glass. Grilles made of vinyl do not require painting.

2. Welded insulating glass. This consists of two panes of glass sealed at the edges, with a layer of dry air between. Insulating glass eliminates the need for installing and maintaining storm sash. A home with insulating glass has only half the window area to be cleaned as a home with storm sash.

They Would Rather Switch Than Have Their Own Home

To turn a familiar phrase around, a home isn't always a house. Sometimes it's an apartment.

In fact, more apartments have become homes than ever before. Multiple dwelling units account for one out of every three new housing starts, according to latest figures.

The reason for the upsurge in apartment building and apartment living are many, including increased crowding in urban and suburban areas and higher land costs.

Apartments appeal to young marrieds and to retired couples, both more numerous today. Single persons living alone and families who no longer want the responsibilities of home ownership also make up the market for apartments.

People who live in apartments seek a variety of advantages, including maintenance-free living, increased services and luxury features such as swimming pools.

Apartment builders, for their part, are turning to building products and materials that lead to lower maintenance and operating costs. An example is the new Anderson Perma-Sheath windows and gliding doors. These vinyl-clad units do not require painting and reduce heating and cooling costs.

One objection that hindered apartment construction in many communities in the past was the belief that high-rise apartments resulted in higher costs for schools and other municipal services. Studies have shown this is not the case, and many municipalities now consider apartments a highly desirable type of construction.

WEEK'S WORK

By JACK BEASTALL

The last of the outdoor chrysanthemums should be lifted for storage in cold frames.

Plant tulips, bulbous Dutch iris, and all kinds of flowering and evergreen shrubs, conifers, ornamental and fruiting trees.

In preparation for winter potting and seed sowing, take under cover a supply of compost and obtain a pail or two of sharp clean sand from the sand and gravel dealers. Never allow the soil to become dust dry or the essential bacteria will be lost.

Dredgers Build Lavish Harbor

Special to The Times

All along the Mediterranean Coast between Montpellier and Perpignan huge dredgers are sucking up and spitting out sand to form new yacht harbors and building land.

One big harbor has already been finished, three others are under way and tower cranes stalk above the sites of new hotels and apartments.

Thousands of acres of forest are being planted and ribbons of motorway laid across the low-lying Languedoc-Roussillon landscape that some Frenchmen predict will be the Florida of Europe. They also say it will be the premier yachting centre in the Mediterranean.

As recently as 1965 this 115 miles of coastline consisted of a series of inaccessible, mosquito-infested lagoons supporting occasional handfuls of fishermen and one or two small towns such as Agde and Sete. Its miles of sandy beaches were virtually unknown.

French government officials pooh-pooh any suggestion that the idea of transforming the region into a tourists' paradise can be attributed to any one man. All they are prepared to say is that a month's hard bargaining preceded the inclusion of a $70 million budget for the project in the Fifth Plan (1965-70). A similar sum is expected to be spent on public works in the Sixth Plan being prepared.

To get this regional holiday development under way a new kind of administrative machine was set up in Paris to jerk the departments of the French government out of their traditional blinkered independence into close co-operation. This is a "mission interministerielle pour l'amenagement touristique du littoral du Languedoc-Roussillon," which was set up in 1963.

This machine is surprisingly small in manpower but, characteristically for France, highly centralized. Mixed public and private companies have been set up along the coast to handle the sale of serviced building land but they have only an advisory relationship to the mission interministerielle.

The mission started its work by eliminating the mosquitoes, doing a regional survey and plan, and buying land. The outcome will be a string of seven resorts, mostly new villages in clusters near to an existing town.

Three People Injured

DUNCAN — Three adults were injured but two children escaped unhurt in a car accident shortly before 8 a.m. today.

A car carrying a local family collided with a creamery truck. A man and two women went to hospital as the first casualties to be treated at the new Cowichan District Hospital which opened at midnight.

The truck struck a power pole breaking the transformer which knocked out power over a wide area. The resulting explosion was heard a mile away.

The injured are Mr. and Mrs. Ben Joseph and Mrs. Carol Thorne, all of Duncan.

Hospital authorities at noon said they were all in fair condition.

PENDER ISLAND — George Pearson's CARE Christmas tree on Pender Island is blazing across Navy Channel for the eighth consecutive year.

For every donation received for gifts of food to CARE, a light will be added to the Christmas tree.

Mr. Pearson says: "One dollar will give 27 pounds of food to some hungry family. No deductions whatever for expenses. Where can you get better value for your dollar? Please decide you will have a light this year on our tree, and with us, tell the world that you do CARE."

The tree was first lighted Christmas 1960 when $102.50 was collected to provide 2,244 pounds of food. Donations have increased each year until last Christmas when $630 was given to purchase 17,010 pounds of food for hungry people of the world.

Mr. Pearson reported $135 had been collected before the fund officially opened. Donations may be sent to George Pearson, Pender Island, B.C.

Radio station CFWB in Campbell River applied to the Board of Broadcast Governors Friday to increase its daytime power to 1,000 watts from 250.

William G. Browne, station president, said the increase is needed to solidify the station's signal throughout its coverage area. He did not expect the station would show much of a revenue rise because of the boost.

KELSEY BAY—Beat-batting has become a fad in this area.

A beat bat is a musical instrument designed and developed by Hetty and Doug Frederickson of Kelsey Bay.

The instrument is about 5½ inches long and made of different wood grains, and somewhat resembles a miniature washboard.

It takes two to get into the swing of things.

The two beatbats with elastic straps for handgrips, are rubbed and clapped together in time with singing or music.

Grooves in the wood give different tones to the music.

The first school in B.C. known to use them is Sayward School at Kelsey Bay, where pupils beat out music in conjunction with a record-player during music classes.

Mrs. Frederickson said 87 school boards in B.C. had written asking for details, including some as far away as Peace River.

The beat bats teach children to keep time, co-ordination and make them more aware of the basic construction of music.

FOCUS

By BRAD NUGENT

When Roy Orbison and his force of musicians visited here last Saturday night they left behind him a big first for Victoria.

Of all the pop music shows that have been held in the Memorial Arena this was the first to pack the arena.

Couple of weeks before the show, the promoters relocated the stage three times as ticket sales kept skyrocketting.

Those Victorians who left their ticket buying to the last minute missed what has to be the best pop sound show to invade the arena.

●

Roy Orbison was at his best as were all the acts that hit the stage.

The Witness Inc., a Canadian group which work out of Toronto, started things out and put a big confirmation stamp onto my long-standing idea that we have got a lot of great talent kicking Canada.

The Candymen, Roy's backup band warmed the stage for Orbison, who made his appearance with all his hits including Only the Lonely, Running Scared, Crying and Pretty Woman.

●

If you missed the show Roy will be back next year so you still have a chance to see this top entertainer in action.

Meanwhile, he's got a new single coming out mid-January. He wouldn't let me in on any names but, being Orbison, it's got to be good.

MOVIE REVIEW

Children Doing Nicely Then Dad Came Home

OUR MOTHER'S HOUSE
Adult Drama
Odeon Theatre
By NORMAN CRIBBENS

A somewhat unsavory theme has been developed, by skilful direction and very competent acting, into an engrossing study of family life under unusual circumstances.

The mother (Anette Carrell) has been gravely ill for some time but keeps rein over her seven children—ages from four to 13—from her bed.

One night the eldest child (Margaret Brooks) finds the mother dead. She tells the others and they agree to keep their bereavement a secret in order to escape being sent to an orphanage.

They bury her surreptitiously in the back garden and conceal her possessions in a shed. One of the children forges her signature on a family allowance cheque and the youngsters continue to live on it.

But the eldest son (Louis Sheldon-Williams) learns that their dissolute father (Dirk Bogarde) is still alive and contacts him.

★ ★ ★

Bogarde returns and, in a subtle performance, charms the youngsters with a gruff tenderness they have never known before, having previously been dominated by their mother's pious moralizing.

But he is far from being a model parent. He finds their bank book, steals from them and brings strange women to their home. Only the eldest child objects and it appears her objection is rooted more in jealousy than morality.

With all the subtlety of a Shakespearian actor, Bogarde somehow avoids being despicable. Scoundrel he may be, but there is something in him that defies condemnation.

The generally morbid theme is handled with delicacy by producer-director Jack Clayton and the musical score by Georges Delerne supplies a dramatic undertow.

Pamela Franklin (who has played unusual children before is saddled with an awkwardly-drawn character—an emotional girl who becomes the family mystic, then succumbs to Bogarde's fatal charm. The juvenile performances generally are excellent.

Timid Composers Ticked Off

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP) — Why do so many Broadway musicals flop? Why is a good show tune so hard to find?

Simple, says Lehman Engel: "Writers ignore vital principles. Song composers are afraid."

Engel has been involved with 159 assorted Broadway ventures over the years, as conductor, arranger, composer or consultant. In a recently-published book, The American Musical Theatre, he analyses the anatomy of creative success.

"December is almost upon us," noted the man from Beach Drive. "Our staff is already talking about a Christmas party."

"They should talk to our front desk," said our Maitre d', Leslie. He pointed out that IMPERIAL'S new wing was built for private receptions and meetings. The walls expand or shrink to fit the gathering.

The carpets are soft, the furnishings luxurious and the refreshments adjustable to suit all tastes. Decorations are a matter of individual choice too. And there's generous parking at the door.

"There's a catch?" said the man from Beach Drive.

"Yes," said Leslie, "you must act fast. We're booking up quickly."

And IMPERIAL salutes to city clerk Morran Waller for setting up not one but five polling places for the city's December elections; to Dr. Peter Ransford, new advisory committee head to Canadian Highway Safety Council, and to police academy standout, Sgt. John Markin.

One Formula For Happiness

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Music Critic

"Ears that listen, eyes that read, voices that sing, bodies that move, minds that create."

There is no doubt about it. That is one formula for happiness; for building a healthy mind, a stable personality, an avenue for expression and a sense of fulfillment.

And it is happening. Despite the catastrophe of the Chant Report with regard to the arts in British Columbia, it is happening in our school system.

Last September a new music curriculum was introduced into B.C. schools by the Department of Education.

Created for implementation from kindergarten to Grade VI, the new Primary Music Guide issued by the Department of Education could scarcely be better devised.

"Let's help children enjoy music" says the Guide, "by singing a variety of songs with attention to suitable pitch, appropriate tempo, accurate rhythm, good tone, artisitic interpretation.

"By listening to a variety of selections and building a basic repertoire; by instrumental activities, by rhythmic activities, by reading and understanding and by creating."

Saanich School Board has moved quickly to make sure the new curriculum works efficiently by providing the teachers with a teacher.

Appointment of Mrs. Eva McCallum as co-ordinator in music and art for the district was followed by a request from school principals that she concentrate for the present on interpreting and initiating the new music curriculum.

Music Periods Held Every Day

Mrs. McCallum spends approximately two weeks in each of Saanich's 14 elementary schools and teachers arrange their time tables to enable a music period to be held in each primary grade every day during her visit.

Demonstration lessons make use of rhythm and classroom instruments — among other, melody bells, resonator bells, auto-harp and accordion.

With concentration in the primary grades on rhythm — beat, accent and rhythmic pattern — drums, tone blocks and rhythm sticks are used extensively.

At this level the approach is emotional rather than intellectual.

Children are not told "This is two-four time so there are two beats to a measure." Instead they are encouraged to "feel" the beat.

Tonal instruments such as step bells, xylophones and melody bells are added in Grade II and in Grades III and IV, piano group instruction and the exploration of flutaphones, tonettes and song flutes is available.

The children's reaction leaves no doubt even at this early stage, of the success of the project in terms of interest and pleasure.

Excited whispers, eager faces, raised hands greet the appearance of a teacher with an assortment of recently-acquired classroom instruments.

The Department of Education and Saanich School Board should feel deeply gratified at the response that is general among parents, pupils and teachers.

University of British Columbia's Dr. Lloyd Slind, co-author of the newly prescribed music text series, "Basic Goals in Music," is particularly impressed over the wisdom and initiative shown in appointing the music co-ordinator.

Saanich Is Giving Leadership

Saanich, he considers, is giving leadership in taking this long forward step and bringing about home and school communication and co-operation in making music a pleasureable part of daily life.

A group of parents who attended a regular music period at Cordova Bay School recently are unanimous in voicing not only their own interest and enthusiasm, but in reporting on their children's reactions.

"It used to be with school music," says Mrs. A. Willock, 5047 Cordova Bay, "if you were good enough you were picked to sing in the school choir for concerts and festivals. But if your sense of pitch wasn't developed or you were a monotone you didn't participate in any musical activity and you naturally lost all interest."

The whole point of the new primary music curriculum is, of course, that children do not have to have any special talent or ability in order to participate — that they are simply learning to listen, to understand and to enjoy.

If, for some youngsters it leads to more specific study, then they will have received an excellent foundation. If not, they will have gained something that in many cases will become an enrichment of their whole lives.

One mother, determined that her children should not suffer what she considers a deprivation in her own life, took her two small children twice a week on the long trek to rhythm classes in the city.

Now she is delighted to find a similar activity available right in their school.

Child Demonstrates New Skills

Mrs. Albert Bysouth, Haliburton Road, reports that her kindergarten aged son comes home full of his experience in the music period and demonstrates what they have done in class.

She says that she was amazed, when she watched a class in action, how quickly the little ones took to the ideas and how well they got along.

The school principals are also keenly interested in the effectiveness of the work under the co-ordinator.

Mrs. Barbara Lassfolk, principal of Sidney Elementary, says that Mrs. McCallum's two weeks in her school has stimulated an interest in music and an awareness on the part of the teachers of the possibilities that can develop in this area.

"It has familiarized the teachers with new approaches, use of instruments and so forth, and has encouraged them to develop their own creative ideas," Mrs. Lassfolk feels.

The decision of the Saanich School Board with regard to the co-ordinator for the music and art curriculum, is matched by their appointment of Austin Scott to organize and instruct bands in the junior secondary schools at Mount Newton, Sidney and Royal Oak.

Two mornings each week Mr. Scott gives instruction to children of Grades VI and VII at Cordova Bay, Sidney and Brentwood Elementary schools.

Through an arrangement with musical supply firms, the instruments are rented or purchased by the pupils.

Other school boards could well emulate the very modern and far-sighted leadership Saanich has given.

IT'S ALMOST CHRISTMAS but you wouldn't know it by looking at Scrooge played by Norman Tyrell in musical The Stingiest Man In Town opening in Victoria Nov. 28.

Scrooge Yuletide Tale Opens on November 28

Probably the most popular of all the long-lived novels of Charles Dickens is the melodramatic, tender and amusing story, The Christmas Carol.

Widely translated it has been highly successful in all media—stage, screen, television—and has delighted old and young through the generations.

Now Victorians will see it as a stage musical presented at the McPherson Playhouse from Nov. 28 through Dec. 2 by Victoria Operatic Society.

Title of the stage version is The Stingiest Man In Town.

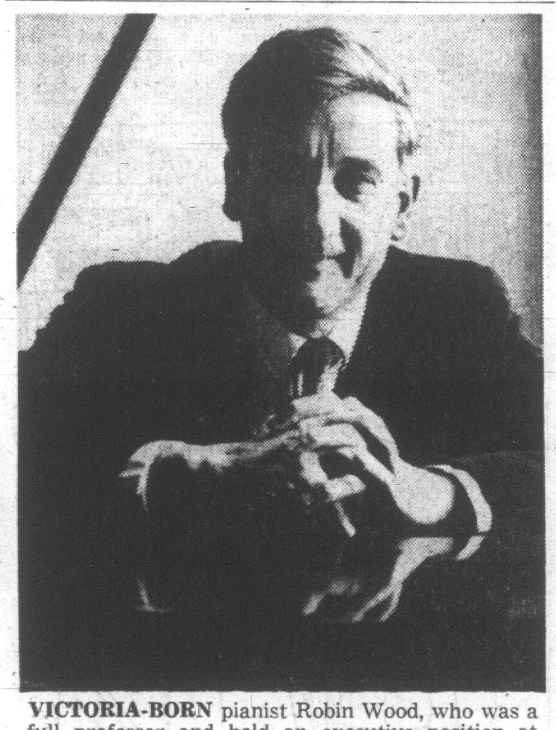
Characters in Christmas Carol have become synonyms—Tiny Tim for childlike faith, Bob Cratchit for optimism in adversity and the quality of forgiveness; Scrooge for meanness in all its aspects.

In the VOS version, these characters come to life in the persons of Wyck Porteous as Tim, Ray Middleton as Cratchit and Norman Tyrrell as Scrooge.

These are only a few in the exceptionally large cast which is under the direction of Stuart Baker with chorus movement and choreography being designed by June Elsdon.

The musical score is full of tuneful, singable numbers and special dance sequences by the Wynne Shaw Dancers will be part of the show.

Howard Denike is the musical director.



VICTORIA-BORN pianist Robin Wood, who was a full professor and held an executive position at the Royal Academy of Music in London, will be soloist with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra this weekend. Mr. Wood will play the Beethoven Fourth Piano Concerto with Laszlo Gati and the orchestra at the Royal Theatre 3 p.m. Sunday and 8:30 p.m. Monday.

Playing Dates For Camelot At McPherson

Playing dates for Camelot at the McPherson Playhouse are Dec. 26 to Jan. 6 (evening performances plus three matinees, Dec. 26, 30 and Jan. 6).

Rehearsals will start the final week of November.

The Nutcracker Coming to 'Mac'

A traditional Christmas entertainment in many parts of the world which had its beginning at the Imperial Court of old Russia, is a performance of Tchaikowsky's fairytale ballet, The Nutcracker.

This year it will be a part of Victoria's Christmas season when it is presented by San Francisco's Ballet Celeste at the McPherson Playhouse.

The company of 45—22 are British Columbia dancers, including several Victorians—will give five performances beginning Monday, Dec. 18.

Evening performances will begin at 8:30 p.m. and there will be two matinees, Dec. 19 and 20, at 3:30 p.m.

Following the Victoria engagement, the company will present The Nutcracker in Vancouver at the Queen Elizabeth Playhouse.

Director's Workshop

Bastion Theatre School's first week-end workshop will be held on Nov. 24, 25 and 26, at 1840 Blanshard Street.

It will be a special director's workshop in four sessions, Friday evening from 8 to 10:30 p.m., Saturday afternoon and evening from 2 to 4:30 and 8 to 10:30 p.m., and Sunday afternoon from 2 to 4:30 p.m.

Eugene Gallant, head of Bastion Theatre School, will be in charge.

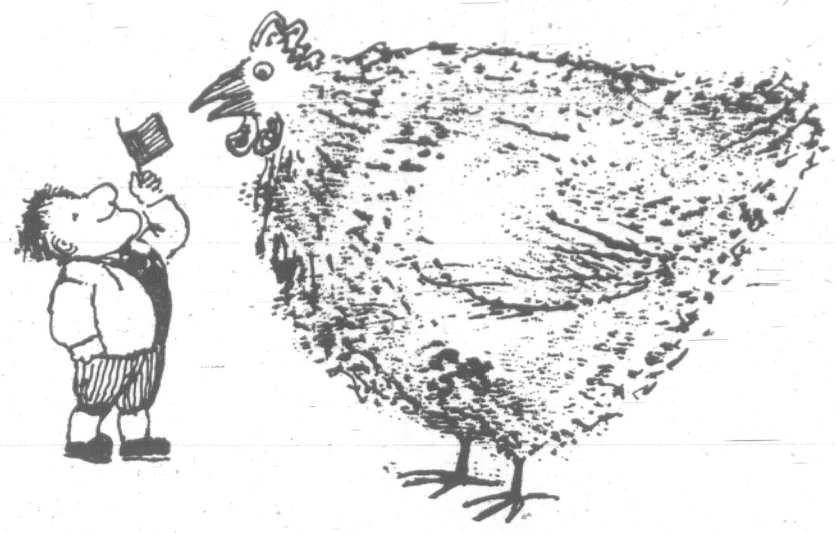
The Book Page

Edited by Joan Coldwell



'NINE-TEN, the big fat hen,' is a favorite rhyme for young readers of The Mother Goose Treasury by Raymond Briggs, appropriate for pre-school children because of its 897 illustrations as well as its easily-learned lines. Drawings won national award for book in Britain.

MONSTERS AND GOBLINS SPICE TALES FOR YOUNG

Fantasies are the cream of writing for children, reaching the highest peaks of orginality and interpreting reality better than most "realistic" stories.

But even fantasies of imaginary worlds such as C. S. Lewis' Narnia or J. R. R. Tolkien's Middle Earth adhere to strict rules within the given frame.

Eric Kastner's new creation, The Little Man, translated and imported from Germany, has just a single touch of fantasy, two-inch tall Maxie Pichelsteiner. His size is so central to the story that it creates the new dimension of action common to fantasy. He lost his equally tiny parents, for example, when they went to the top of the Eiffel Tower to admire the view, were blown off their feet by a gale, and were last seen "hand in hand, spinning away into the distance."

●

Yet, as in Mary Norton's Borrowers series, the other details are completely realistic. Maxie's training and performance as assistant to Professor Hokus von Pokus in Zilke's Circus, his kidnapping and self-rescue told in Kastner's style of light but deliberate overstatement should fill some wonderful evenings of family reading aloud.

Folklore generally produces interesting non-people, and the seven stories by Isaac Singer in Zlateh the Goat include angels, devils, and assorted goblins.

But it's his people you remember. This distinguished writer's first book for children draws from middle-European Jewish folklore, and his stupid people particularly have a classic appeal.

●

The First Shlemiel is endearing in his total ineptitude as is Atzel, who imagines that he is dead. Singer does not sweeten the devil stories, either, but presents them in their full fury and power. Maurice Sendak's drawings mean as much as the artfully told tales, and altogether the book is a masterpiece.

Joyce Varney's The Magic Maker borders on fantasy just enough to make it interesting.

Twm Tybach, a Welsh boy, is convinced that his new American exchange teacher is a teg, one of the fair-haired witches of Wales that his Gran is always telling him about.

●

Since Twm has light hair himself he hopes she will teach him to fly, or at least bring his friend Gypsy's pet weasel back to life at the next full moon.

Bringing Twm back into a poor world of coal mines and hard work, but also the Welsh world rich in poetry and song makes a fine tale for middle grades.

For a change from fantasy, The Kitchen Madonna by Rumer Godden offers unique individuals well worth knowing.

Gregory, a seemingly aloof, selfish 9-year-old who allows no one to touch his foundling cat or come into his loft room, becomes totally absorbed in creating a "dressed up picture, pricked with gold" for their Ukrainian housekeeper, Marta.

●

After a painfully embarrassing but very funny trip to Rostov's in London with garrulous little sister to buy a Russian icon with their pocket money, Gregory uses his ingenuity and painstaking care to look for precisely the right elements to make the picture. The expression of nobility of his gift and the depth of his feeling never becomes sentimental, but is carefully controlled and understated in this story of personal growth and the artistic process. The glossy colored pictures by Carol Barker match and enhance the text.

Somewhat older children will enjoy diving into the melodrama of two English books, Friend with a Secret by Angela Bull, and Devil in the Fog by Leon Garfield. In the first, Lucy Quentin is liberated from the proper Victorian world of nursery and drawing room, and The Misses Turner's Select Establishment for Young Ladies by her Friend Olivia, who claims that she knows a wizard, and her grandmother is a witch. Olivia's overactive imagination, however, has led her to be used as a pawn by her "wizard," a smuggler. Both girls find that helping Aunt Clare edit her children's literary magazine is a more satisfying pastime after all. Good pre-Bronte reading.

The haphazard lives of strolling players in 18th century England form the basis of Leon Garfield's novel. Lost heirs, thieving uncles, aloof noblemen, witch-like old women and boistrous showmen are presented with appropriate Dickensian flourish.

REACHING FOR ADVENTURE in Hugh Lofting's Doctor Doolittle, A Treasury. Just published by McClelland and Stewart, selections from eight of the original Dolittle books are illustrated by Lofting's own drawings, many of them never before published in book form.

Problems of Growing Up Theme for Teen Books

Young teen-agers have both adult and older juvenile publishing to choose from.

The Newbery Award winner this year for the best American children's book is ideal for girls from grade 6 or 7 through secondary school. Up a Road Slowly, by Irene Hunt, tells of a strong-willed girl's growth from an 8-year-old to a young woman.

Aunt Cordelia, a formal, seemingly inflexible woman who raises Julie after her mother's death, gives her the stability to meet situations of poverty and death, the birth of her sister's child, and unhealthy and natural romances. The book is distinctive because of its carefully chosen and revealing details, and the restraint and sparsity of its language.

●

Douglas, by Grace Richardson, gives the parallel growth of a boy to maturity.

Douglas is first shown in grade 9, an incurable liar, awkward, pimply, knowing that he has rich musical talent and imaginative intelligence, but unable to develop them.

Escapades such as driving a standing water truck and flooding the school, or releasing the frogs waiting to be dissected endear him to his classmates as a character.

But it isn't until University (McGill) that he discovers the social advantage of his intellectual uniqueness. It has its place as a "problem" book, but lacks the grace of Irene Hunt's style.

Two volumes of Russian short stories will also interest young people.

●

The seven stories in Ivan the Fool and Other Tales of Leo Tolstoy, chosen and translated by Guy Daniels, include an amazing variety in style—the folk tale quality of the title story, a story of children's sensitivity to political inequality, and traditional adventure tales, "Prisoner in the Caucasus" and "Bear Hunt."

The final story, "God Sees the Truth But is in No Hurry to Reveal It" ends on a note of dissatisfaction typical of Tolstoy's refusal to give easy answers for the purpose of inspiration.

Nobel Prize winner Mikhail Sholokhov, on the other hand, chooses only stories "to help people become better, nobler . . . to awaken man's love of man, his striving for humanistic ideals, for progress."

Fierce and Gentle Warriors, translated by Miriam Morton, includes three such stories, involving soldiers toughened by the struggle for equality but softening in the face of animals or children.

His "touch of humanity" emphasis is successful because of the precision of his language, which comes through smoothly in this translation.

Robert Silverberg's book on "vanished and vanishing creatures" is worth reading just to be able to roll the animal names around on your tongue.

The Awk, the Dodo and the Oryx gives factual acounts of the extinction or salvation of Aurochs, Sugongs, Quagga, Moa and Rukhs, besides a fine introduction to the processes of natural selection and suggestions for preservation.

●

A concrete example of wholesale salvation of animals is John Walsh's Time is Short and the Water Rises.

The author was in charge of Operation Gwamba, an International Society for the Protection of Animals project to evacuate 10,000 animals trapped by the spreading artificial lake behind the Afobaka Dam in Surinam.

The protestations of the armadillos, giant snakes, kinkajous and other animals, drippingly indignant about being rescued, the pressure of time, and the many photos, give the book an unquestionable appeal.

Select —Never Censor

By KAREN SMITH

If children and young people read at all outside of school these days, too often their diet consists of comic books or the endless Hardy Boys or Carolyn Keene-type of "mystery-adventure" series cranked out by anonymous writers and devoid of individuality. They may seem harmless fare, but with truly creative books available, memorable books that will stimulate further and better reading at because they stir the imagination and move the heart. There is no time to waste on the mediocre.

"Only the very finest books are suitable for the brief, impressionable years of childhood," says Dorothy Reid, author, librarian and patroness of Young Canada's Book Week, currently being celebrated across the country.

●

"Honest books, in which the author and illustrator have brought together their richest talents to reveal the heritage of the past, an understanding of the present, and the promise of the future."

And when you take the time to find these books and introduce them to children and young people, they will respond.

This emphasis on quality does not mean that parents, librarians and educators should censor young people's reading. Censorship, whether examining texts for four-letter-words or forbidding young people to read certain books, is "self-defeating and a waste of time," according to Roderick Haig-Brown, Campbell River Magistrate, author of adult and children's books, and a former patron of Young Canada's Book Week.

"The troubles of children — or adults — never come from facing realities." There is a definite difference between selecting on the basis of quality, and censoring books, basically a negative approach.

Libraries, for example, are not meant to choose "safe" books for young people, devoid of controversy for the narrow purpose of giving lessons in character building, but to choose the great literature and that which leads to it, books which interpret all kinds of experiences, not only the sweet or pleasant.

Children need exposure to these books not only from home and public libraries, but from libraries in their schools, both elementary and secondary, staffed with qualified librarians who know the literature and can excite them about reading.

●

Most of the books reviewed today were chosen from the attractive display in the Children's and Young People's departments of the Greater Victoria Public Library, in celebration of Young Canada's Book Week.

The 350 books on display represent the variety and include the best of the last year's purchases — books of delight and stimulation. Anyone visiting the library before Wednesday, Nov. 22, may have an annotated list of the books, and place a reserve on any they are interested in borrowing.

By Children's Librarian

Today's commentaries on outstanding books for children were prepared by Karen Smith, a children's librarian with the Greater Victoria Public Library.

Mrs. Smith gives book-talks to children in local schools, to stimulate reading-habits and encourage use of the Public Library.

Mrs. Smith has an MA in Librarianship from the University of Washington. Before moving to Victoria recently, she was for four years a children's librarian at the Seattle Public Library.

'Not Necessary To Actually See Drinking'

It is not necessary to be actually seen drinking to be convicted of consuming liquor in public.

In central court Friday the Crown won a conviction on the point of law which states, in effect, that it only need appear, to a reasonable person, that someone is about to drink.

But while Magistrate William Ostler followed the law and found Helen Lambert, 616 Garbally, guilty of the offence, he suspended sentence because of evidence that she was trying to beat her alcohol problem and had not had a drink for more than a month.

Police said that the accused was with two men who were drinking on the Johnson Street Wharf Sept. 27 but the police did not actually see the accused take a drink. She had the smell of liquor on her breath.

The accused was placed on a $100 bond for two years on the conditions that she must not drink or have any convictions against her.

A man who committed bigamy was placed on probation for two years out of consideration for his children.

Frederick Potapov, of Vancouver, married a woman in Manitoba then remarried in Victoria while his legal wife was alive.

Magistrate Ostler, placing Potapov on two years' probation, said, "My instinct is to send you to jail but it would serve no good purpose for the women and children involved nor society."

He said the accused must work out a plan to assist the children of both unions.

Judge Orders Paddle In Rape Case

WINNIPEG (CP) — Strokes of the paddle were ordered today for two men convicted in what the sentencing judge described as "a gang rape."

"This has become a frequent offence in this community and its prevalence justified the employment of a rigorous deterrent," said Mr. Justice F. M. Bastin in assize court.

"Uusally it is committed as a form of cruel sports by immature and vicious youths."

Roy Carl Antonation, 25, was sentenced to 18 months in Headingley provincial jail and ordered to receive 12 strokes of the paddle. Robert Harvey Johnson, 23, was sentenced to 12 months and 10 strokes.

The two were convicted on two counts of rape and one of indecent assault involving a 21-year-old university student.

'Lessening Penalties Would Hike Problem'

By STUART AUERBACH

WASHINGTON — Narcotics commissioner Henry L. Giordano took a hard line this week against efforts to ease the federal marijuana laws and blamed recent increases in the use of the drug on a "permissive attitude by people who should know better."

In his testimony before the house inter-governmental relations subcommittee, Giordano disagreed with food and drug commissioner Dr. James L. Goddard, who said Tuesday that the penalties for the use and possession of marijuana should be lessened.

"Most of the criticism (of the current penalties) is either by persons who are not fully informed or by persons who want to legalize possession of marijuana," Giordano said.

Ask Him Yourself'

He refused to state which catagory Goddard falls under. "Ask him yourself," Giordano said, in a hallway interview.

Goddard made it clear to the subcommittee Tuesday that he feels marijuana is a dangerous drug and he opposes legalizing its use. But he said the penalties for its use and possession—up to 10 years in jail and a 20,000 dollar fine—are too stiff.

Subcommittee members reacted more kindly to Giordano's hard-line testimony than they did to Goddard's more liberal views. Rep. Florence P. Dwyer (R-N.J.) termed Goddard's remarks "unwise" and said "he should have kept them to himself.

Both Giordano and Goddard agreed that LSD is more harmful than marijuana. Goddard, however, suggested reducing the penalty for use and possession of marijuana to simple seizure while Giordano wanted to increase the penalty for possessing LSD.

Misinformation

Lessening the penalties for use or possession of marijuana would "increase the problem 10 fold," Giordano insisted.

Charts indicating the number of marijuana users "would go right through the roof if we removed the penalties," he said.

The biggest problem, Giordano said, is "misinformation that marijuana is not dangerous. Professors use it, he said, and encourage their students to try it.

He said he can trace the increase in marijuana usage to about four years ago, when a campaign started to legalize the use of the drug. Proponents of legalized marijuana claim it is less harmful than alcohol, he said.

Giordano termed it "unfortunate" that marijuana is compared with alcohol—"another substance that could be dangerous also."

He said that "a small percentage of Americans" use marijuana. But the drug has spread from the lower social and economic levels of society "into the suburbs and into the middle and upper strata of our society."

He cited statistics backing the narcotic bureau's claim that marijuana is "a stepping stone" to hard drugs such as heroin. Of 60,697 active heroin addicts, he said, 90 per cent. started on marijuana.

WEEK ON MARKETS

'Investors Are Drifting Around'

By FRITS ROOS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Prices were mixed in light activity on Canada's major stock markets this week.

The Toronto industrial index slipped .22 to 162 and Montreal's .68 to 166.47, but in Vancouver, the index picked up .41 to 161.14.

One Toronto investment analyst said investors "are drifting around — any bad news could swing the market into a loop."

"The bear signs are out," he said. "Good news only seems to lead to short rallies."

Another analyst said people are "willing to invest but don't know what to put their money on."

Glamor stocks already have been pushed to record heights while not too much can be expected right now from blue chips. Canada's basic industries are working below capacity, he said.

At Toronto, food and retails showed major gains among industrial stocks.

Industrial mines, beverages, forest products and steels slipped. Oil refineries and pipelines showed fractional gains and banks and utilities remained unchanged.

Western oils moved strongly but base metals were down.

At Montreal, papers, utilities and banks were down. In Vancouver, western mines rallied but pipelines slipped.

BLUE CHIPS BALANCE

Gains and losses were about even among blue chips.

At Toronto, Inco gained ½ to 119 in a late surge. Pembina Pipe Line climbed 2½ to 22½, Hudson's Bay Co. 1¾ to a high of 22¼ and Simpsons 1 to 34½.

Noranda and Falconbridge fell 1½ to 50 and 85½. MacMillan Bloedel was off 1 to 24¾, CPR and Cominco ¾ to 59¾ and 26½ and Walker's ⅝ to 33⅞.

At Montreal, Falconbridge dropped 3¼ to 86 and Noranda 1½ to 50. CPR, which reported a drop in nine-month profits, MacMillan Bloedel and Texaco each fell 1.

Inco jumped ¾.

Dosco jumped 1¾ to 9 at Toronto and Hawker Siddeley, one of the week's most active stocks, picked up 65 cents to 3.75 while negotiations continued with Nova Scotia officials about the future of Dosco's Sydney, N.S. plant.

General Products Manufacturing A surged 4½ to 98½ after last week's gain of 14⅛. The company plans to sell two Ontario subsidiaries.

Maple Leaf Gardens rose 3 to 23 at the announcement of a $3-a-share extra dividend, Asbestos Corp. 2¼ to 24 and B.C. Sugar 2⅛ to a high of 44.

FPE Pioneer Electric dropped 4 to 31, Jefferson Lake 2⅜ to 55⅝ and Ingersoll 2⅛ to 33⅞.

At Vancouver, Neon Products fell 25 cents to 9.25 in heavy trading.

BASE METALS DROP

Denison Mines took if on the chin in Toronto with a drop of 3 to 78½ following publication of a Toronto broker's report saying that uraniums are overpriced. Rio Algom fell 1¼ to 33½ and Roman Corp. ⅞ to 27½.

At Montreal, Denison dropped 2½ to 78½.

On the Canadian Stock Exchange Thursday, Carbec Mines plunged 3.00 to 95 cents and Matachewan Canadian 2.06 to 64 cents. Trading was suspended on the exchange pending an investigation into the affairs of the companies.

At Toronto, Associated Arcadia picked up 13 to 36 cents and Kidd Copper 23 to 83 cents. Trading resumed Tuesday after a one-week suspension at the request of Kidd Copper, which reported assay results of a copper-nickel mineralization on Sudbury-area property.

WESTERN OILS GAIN

Hudson's Bay Oil jumped 4¾ to a high of 41½ at Toronto.

Scurry-Rainbow was up 3¼ to 43¾ and Canadian Superior Oil 1¼ to 43½. Dome Petroleum fell 1¾ to 53½ and Central-Del Rio ⅜ to 20⅝.

Plains Petroleums gained 2 to 55 cents in sales of more than 150,000 shares at Vancouver.

On index, western oils advanced 4.16 to 205.13 at Toronto, and golds 3.80 to 172.64. Base metals fell 2.15 to 103.42. Volume totalled 13,806,000 shares compared with 15,337,000 last week.

At Montreal, the composite index slipped .64 to 156.12. Volume was 5,651,000 shares compared with 4,456,000 last week.

At Vancouver; western mines gained 3.67 to 192.63. Pipelines slipped .61 to 130.13. Volume was 5,248,000 shares.

BAKERS BACK STRIKE ACTION

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bakery workers at two Vancouver locals voted 56-5 Friday to strike in a dispute that could shut down nearly every supermarket in B.C.

The bakers, employed in two Vancouver Safeway stores and the Fairfax Baking Co., approved strike action in a government supervised vote.

Eight companies involved in the dispute — including Safeway, Super-Valu and Dominion — have warned they will lock out all their bakery employees if the Bakery and Confectionary Workers Union calls a strike against one of the companies.

Detroit Papers Closed

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Free Press suspended publication indefinitely Friday "because of continued violations of joint contracts by various unions."

The morning newspaper thereby joined the Detroit News, hit by a Teamsters Union strike, in halting the presses, leaving the city without a publishing daily newspaper.

Both newspapers are involved with contract negotiations with the Teamsters and other unions. No Teamsters talks are set at The News until Monday at the earliest. The News halted publication Thursday.

The papers, with a combined circulation of more than 1,000,000, negotiate jointly as the Detroit Newspaper Publishers Association with the unions.

John B. Olsen, Free Press general manager, said some unions had violated their agreements by refusing to cross Teamsters Union picket lines at The News and "their refusal to publishing the News is, in effect, a strike against both papers."

STRUCK IN '64

In 1964, a strike at the two newspapers kept them out of publication for 134 days—one of the longest shutdowns of metropolitan newspapers ever.

Both papers also went into intensive negotiations with the International Typographical Union which represents 700 workers on the papers.

The News laid off all employees, except those in the editorial and business office, and said they would be recalled "when conditions permit."

The Teamsters demand a 15-per-cent basic pay increase this year and a similar increase next year for a two-year contract at The News. The company had offered about four per cent each year. Teamster drivers now average $150.15 a week.

Chrysler Set, GM Next

DETROIT (AP) — Skilled tradesmen have ratified a labor contract with Chrysler Corp., ending fears they might block the agreement through their minority veto power in the United Auto Workers union.

The 12,000 tradesmen Friday night accepted the agreement by a slim margin of about 55 per cent, the UAW said. Earlier, the union's 83,000 production-line workers at Chrysler approved the three-year-pact by a reported 70-per-cent vote.

The union won wage parity for Canadian workers in the agreement. It will be granted gradually during the life of the pact.

Balloting by the tradesmen was "nip and tuck," a UAW spokesman said. He said skilled workers at 24 UAW locals across the U.S. ratified the pact and eight locals rejected it, with votes still to be counted in two remaining units.

"Outcome of the ratification cannot be changed by the two locals whose members have not yet voted," said Douglas A. Fraser, chief UAW negotiator at Chrysler, in a statement announcing the ratification.

John D. Leary, Chrysler vice-president for administration, said company officials were pleased with the ratification.

The tradesmen's veto power, gained earlier this year, is expected to be a questionable element again negotiations with the auto industry giant, General Motors Corp.

GM is the next target of the UAW for a contract to replace the one which expired Sept. 6. The union has been working without a labor pact at GM while negotiating first with Ford Motor Co., second largest automaker, and then with Chrysler.

Many dissident leaders of the skilled tradesmen demanded wage increases of up to $1 an hour, saying they were needed to keep pace with similar workers outside the auto industry. The skilled tradesmen include millwrights, electricians, plumbers and tool-and-die makers.

Cement Plant Near Kamloops Set by LaFarge

VANCOUVER (CP) — A $12,000,000 cement plant is to be built near Kamloops by Lafarge Cement of North America Ltd., it was announced Friday.

Frank M. Ross, chairman of the Canadian executive committee of the parent Ciments Lafarge S.A. of France, said the new plant would begin production in 1969, and would have an annual production of 1,200,000 barrels.

Ciments Lafarge has 31 plants on four continents, with an annual production of 65,000,000 barrels.

Mr. Ross said the new plant would employ about 80 men and would use local raw materials including gypsum from western gypsum's mine at Invermere.

IWA Pickets Block Work

CRANBROOK (CP) — International Woodworkers of America pickets Thursday stopped construction work at a $42,000,000 pulp mill at Skookymchuck, near this southeastern British Columbia community.

The mill is being built by Crestbrook Forest Industries, one of the Southern Interior companies struck by the IWA in a contract dispute.

Arrangements have been made between the IWA and the Building Trades Council to permit construction workers to remove their tools.

The IWA pickets are among 5,000 Southern Interior lumber workers demanding parity with their coast forest industry counterparts.

BUSINESS VIEWS

Hours Longer, Charges Higher

By AB KENT
Business Editor

As competition between banks gets stiffer and pressure from the near-banks mounts, the hours get longer and the charges go higher.

But so do interest rates, with the probable result that any temporary advantage to a depositor or to the banks is soon cancelled out.

Kent

Currently some of the charter banks are making fees in order to compensate for reduced adjustments in service charges and safe deposit box rental fees in order to compensate for reduced income through offering 4½ per cent on pune savings accounts.

Some of the charter bank group had already increased the rental rate and upped the charge for safekeeping of documents held by the bank.

And for ordinary savings account cheque-writing privileges the service charge is up by five cents to 20 cents each.

Those banks which have not already upped the box rental fee will be doing so early in 1968, some according to calendar year, others to match the anniversary date on which boxes were rented.

★ ★ ★

But the amount of increase is startling to some box-holders — a 50 per cent hike from $5 to $7.50 per year minimum. That rate covers only the smallest of metal containers used by depositors to protect stock and bond certificates, insurance policies, deeds and mortgages.

A few of these and the small box is packed so tightly that everything must be removed simultaneously in order to withdraw a single item.

Of course, larger boxes are available, ranging from $10 to $50 a year, and for businesses, bond dealers and institutions, a safe deposit chest can be rented for $200.

All are kept in tight security under individual lock as well as being locked within a vault. Some have the added security of a locked steel gate instead of a door on the safe deposit department, requiring each person to ring for admittance and show his key to be let in.

For that kind of security, perhaps $7.50 a year is a bargain, especially considering the fact that it is 10 to 15 years since the last increase in fees.

★ ★ ★

One Victoria banker said there certainly is a greater demand for safe deposit boxes than ever before.

"People are getting away from the home strong box and mattress-stuffing," he said. "They are more sophisticated about things like that today.

"And there is a growing affluence, more stock market trading, more Canada Savings Bonds being sold and more people making out wills. They have to have some place to keep them."

★ ★ ★

If you've ever wondered why you nearly always have to line up at a bank or to get your hair cut (often a same-trip operation) but can invariably wheel up to a service station for instant gas or to a hairdressing shop with little delay (although the service is more complex), the answer may be simple:

There are something like 32 barber shops listed in this area and 44 banks, compared with 165 service stations and 127 beauty parlors.

Giant Mascot Mines Ltd. this week sent its 75th shipment of nickel-copper concentrates from its mine near Hope to Japan, a program now 7½ years old.

The last order was more than 1,900 wet tons, with nickel averaging 11 per cent and copper 4.4 per cent, valued at $315,736 U.S.

It brought the total since May 1960 to 165,656 tons worth $19,527,845 U.S.

American commerce figures show retailers are ahead of their usual position for this time of year as far as pre-holiday gift trade is concerned.

Canadian merchants might learn a little from the American experience: The increase in buying has been accomplished through promotions that are not linked directly to Christmas, according to a New York report.

Labor Co-Ops Urged To Assist Housing

MONTREAL (CP) — Labor Minister Nicholson says it is regrettable that co-operative societies have not made more use of National Housing Act loans to ease Canada's housing shortage.

Addressing a one-day seminar on public and co-operative housing, Mr. Nicholson said Friday that housing projects by co-operative societies—with financial assistance coming from trade union funds—could help reduce the housing shortage.

"I am well aware that other countries, notably Sweden, have encountered substantial success in co-operative house-building," he said. "But it is also significant that a large measure of financial support was drawn from trade union funds."

The minister said National Housing Act loans have been available for co-operative housing projects since 1953 and that some labor unions are beginning to show an interest in this field.

Dr. A. F. Laidlaw, general secretary of the Co-operative Union of Canada, said co-operative housing may prove an important factor in the coming years in attempts to solve the housing crisis.

He said co-operative housing should have special appeal for Canadian families in the middle-income bracket.

LOSING FAITH

"Canadians are beginning to lose faith in the housing system which has been pushed with considerable vigor in the last 20 years but which is failing to show results for a great many families.

"The virtues of home ownership are not taken for granted any longer, especially since the Canadian population is becoming more mobile all the time."

Outlining advantages of co-operative housing, Dr. Laidlaw said that in addition to the primary financial benefit, atmosphere, group spirit, neighborliness and a sense of interdependence are important factors that can result."

Short-Term Canada Bonds Strengthen

By CANADIAN PRESS

Short-term Government of Canada bonds strengthened on the Canadian bond market this week. The 5½-per-cent Dec. 15, 1969, issue closed at 99.60 bid and 99.70 asked.

Long-term Government of Canada bonds were down one point with the 4½-per-cent Sept. 1, 1983, issue closing at 80⅜ bid and 80⅝ asked.

The provincial market was unchanged with Ontario Hydro 6½-per-cent Sept. 20, 1989, issue closing at 95¾ bid and 96½ asked.

Corporate bonds were unchanged with Imperial Oil 6¾-per-cent 1987, issue closing at 96 bid and 97 asked.

Treasury bills were unchanged with the 91-day bills closing at 4.97 per cent and 182-day bills at 5.25 per cent, respectively, compared with 4.96 per cent and 5.24 per cent last week.

Day-to-day money closed at 4¼ per cent.

Corby Sales, Earnings Up

MONTREAL (CP) — H. Corby Distillers has reported substantial increases in both sales and earnings for the fiscal year ended Aug. 30.

Consolidated sales totalled $24,250,452, up from $19,533,900 in the previous year, and net earnings $3,617,87 or $3.25 a share against $2,01,618 or $2.07 a share in 1966.

Working capital at the end of the fiscal year stood at $14,038,966, up from $12,751,688 at Aug. 31, 1966.

The firm's annual report said the earnings increase in the latest year "is attributable to non-brand bulk sales, the market for which is volatile and subject to wide fluctuations."

B.C. Herring Industry Has Fallen on Evil Days

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's herring fishing industry, once a $5,000,000-plus a year concern, has fallen on evil days.

Some 700 members of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union are appealing to the federal government for aid because of cancellation of the winter herring season, which usually runs from Dec. 1 to May 15.

J. W. Patterson, an executive of the union, said Thursday the situation is grim for these men.

"Even when the catches were good they were only making $2.17 a ton for herring, and processing companies were making about $22 a ton," he said. "But now, the herring reserves have gone so far down nobody's making any money."

He said he agrees fully with the closure, and blames Canadian fishermen for the decline in herring.

"It was overfishing on our part that caused it, and we'll have to wait at least two years before the situation gets any better."

In the total 1962-63 season, B.C. fishermen hauled in 265,647 tons of herring. Last season, the catch was reduced to 133,823 tons.

In the 1964 summer season, which ran from June 1 to Oct. 15, 87,405 tons of herring came over the side. This summer, it was a pitiful 16,540.

"The closure was fully justified all right, but it still leaves 700-odd fishermen all up and down the coast with no chance to make money this winter," said Mr. Patterson. "And the vast majority of them haven't piled up enough stamps to collect even seasonal unemployment insurance benefits."

He said the fishermen averaged about $2,000 clear from the winter herring fisheries each year.

Labor Minister Nicholson has met with representatives of the fishermen, but no definite government action has yet been taken.

"This is a very serious situation," said Mr. Patterson. "It's not only serious for the men involved, but also for the economy of the fishing industry and the province of B.C.,"

CP Hotels Moving Base

MONTREAL — Canadian Pacific Hotels Ltd., a subsidiary of Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd., plans to move its 30-member headquarters staff to Toronto in 1968, it was announced Friday.

E. C. Fitt, vice-president and general manager of the hotel company, said the move is a further step in the planned development of CPH from its origin as a railway department to a separately operated company which owns, manages and leases hotel and restaurant properties.

"The change is designed to link our headquarters operation with our single largest property in Canada, the Royal York Hotel," he said.

Remote-Controlled Locomotives Tested

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian Pacific has started testing Canada's first remote-controlled locomotives using a new radio command system.

The system means that remote-controlled locomotives can be placed in the middle of a long freight train and be operated by the engineman in the leading locomotive. The system is not designed for use in passenger trains.

A year-long test program got under way with the demonstrations of Robot 1-a specially modified unit equipped with a fail-safe radio relay system and so-called lotic cabinets which receive and relay remote control commands from a manned locomotive at the front of the train.

Robot 1 and two mid-train controlled locomotives were put through their paces at the modern push-button classification yards in suburban Cote St. Luc before heading west for testing.

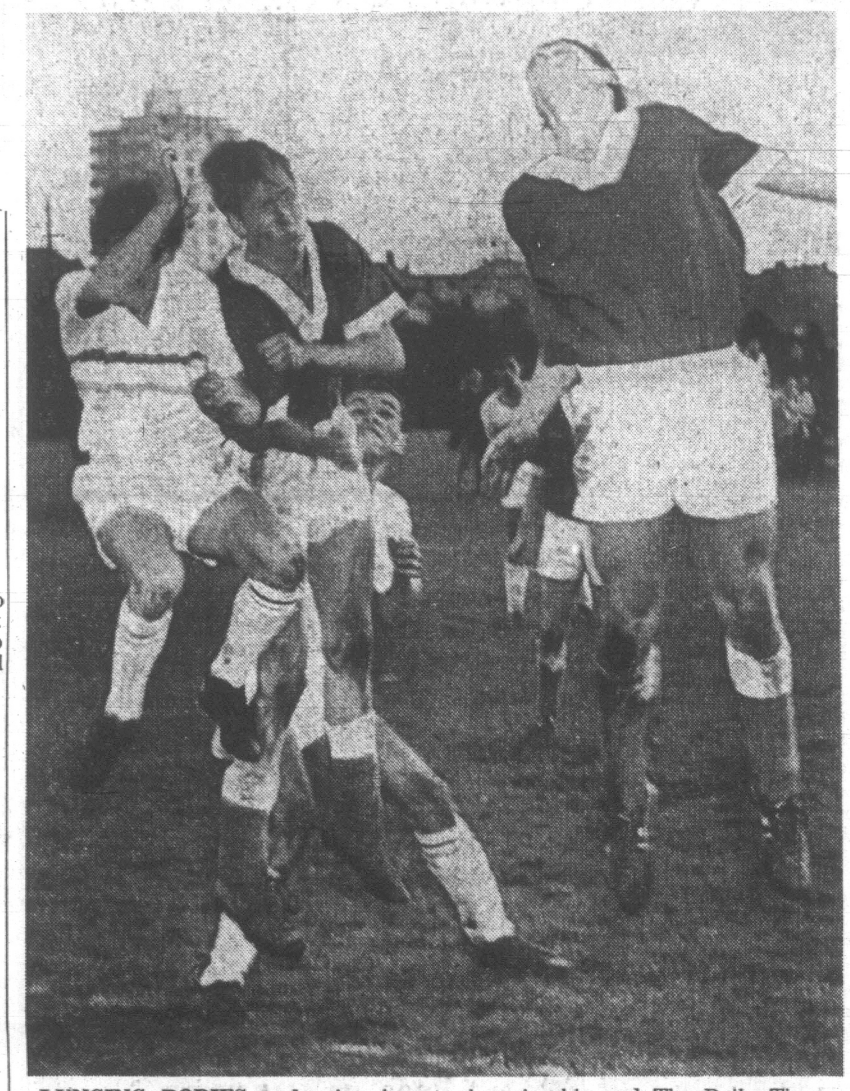
REALLY BEATING DRUMS for Mount View cause were members of school band. Vocalizing helped, too!

BUZZING HAPPILY . . . That was Mount View cheering section when Hornets scored in 2-0 victory over Port Alberni in playoff at Macdonald Park Friday. (Times photos by Irving Strickland).



LUNGING BODIES and grimacing faces marked on-field action as Mount View earned Vancouver Island soccer championship and The Daily Times Trophy. Dark-shirted players are Port Alberni's.

Hustling Hornets Claim Times Cup

Fans Also Show Champion Style In 2-0 Victory

By ERNIE FEDORUK

"Depth and balance . . ."
"And conditioning . . ."

In the eyes of coach Brian Cornall, those were the salient features of Mount View Hornets' soccer attack all season long.

Dennis Grisdale figured it out the same way Friday after Hornets shut out his Port Alberni team 2-0 at Macdonald Park to capture the Vancouver Island high school soccer championship.

With victory went The Daily Times Trophy and an opportunity to advance to the provincial final against the mainland representatives.

LOOKED CONVINCING

The finer details (who, what, where and when) of the B.C. final are still to be arranged, but on Vancouver Island Friday the Hornets made it quite definite. They proved to be best.

And given a chance, Mount View fans also bounced back in championship form. Criticized for taking to the field and berating game officials in the Victoria-area final with Victoria High last Tuesday, Mount View supporters turned out to be perfect fans Friday.

They were noisy, exhuberant and enthusiastic, but never once suggested leaving their seats.

On the field, Mount View players did not quite show the form they displayed in that 3-2 victory over the Vics. But what they had Friday still proved too much for Grisdale's scrappy Alberni team.

SECOND-HALF GOALS

Centre forward Rick Lamoureux and left winger Bill Walker scored the goals, both in the second half, but it was a general, all-around team performance that beat Alberni.

Lamoureux scored his goal 10 minutes after the interval, tapping in Bob Bisson's rebound without difficulty with Alberni goalkeeper Oscar Faoro prostrate and out of the play.

Walker, a strong second-half performer, hammered home insurance with only about five minutes remaining.

Bisson had just come into the game when his sharp-angled shot bounced off a goal-post to afford Lamoureux a chance to score his goal. In a sense, Bisson strongly supported coach Cornall's belief in depth.

CAME ON STRONGLY

Conditioning, an obvious factor against Victoria, also proved a Mount View strongpoint. The strength-sapping Macdonald turf proved no problem to Hornets. Indeed, the Views seemed strongest in the second half.

Alberni was well-served by Faoro, fullback Livio Tedesco and right winger Brian Travelbea, but the up-Island champions'—main lack was a link between the backs and the forwards.

Mount View's forwards, keyed around the play of inside left and captain Dennis Somner, played well together. Any one of the five forwards appeared capable of scoring at any time, and the respect of Alberni was such that Grisdale ordered a 4-3-3 defence in an attempt to hold off the Hornets.

This, they couldn't do.

ALBERNI—Oscar Faoro; Perry Kilby, Livio Tedesco; Terry Oscarson, Dallas Bird, David Cochrane; Ron McEachern, Brian Travelbea, Louie Vermette, Dennis Smith, Kenny Waugh. Reserves—Graham Morgan, Doug Newstead.

Cats Miss Shot At Third Spot

KELOWNA—Victoria Cougars, who missed a shot at third place in the B.C. Junior Hockey League Friday night, will be struggling to avoid slipping into the league cellar here tonight.

Cougars, who were clipped 6-3 by the Essos in Vernon Friday night, continue their three-game, weekend road trip against Kelowna Buckaroos tonight before moving to Kamloops Sunday.

Victory over Vernon would have lifted the Cats into the third spot, which was grabbed by the Essos while the Victorians remained a single point ahead of the Bucks, now reposing in last place.

THREE PENALTIES

Only three penalties were called in the fast-moving game at Vernon as the Cougars scored the first goal and then yielded five straight tallies.

Larry Quechuk collected two goals and two assists for Vernon, which also got goals from Jeff Wilson, Mike Perepolkin, Gerry Vachon and Keith Rolston before 1,635 fans.

Barry Clarke (two goals) and Neil Sanders scored for the Cougars, who got strong games from goalie Murray Findlay and defenceman Greg Evans.

U.S. Expects To Place Ban On Open Meet

NEW YORK (AP) — Robert J. Kelleher, president of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, has expressed doubt that his group will permit American amateur players to compete in an open Wimbledon tournament.

"I do not believe the USLTA would sanction one of its players competing at an open Wimbledon in violation of the rules," Kelleher said following a meeting of the executive committee of the USLTA Friday. He added that the question will be submitted to a membership meeting scheduled for Coronado, Calif. on Feb. 4, 1968.

The radical change, permitting professionals to play in open competition with amateurs at Wimbledon, was recommended recently by a board of the British Lawn Tennis Association. Such competition would be in violation of international regulations and any amateur playing in the tourney could be barred from all amateur competition.

Britain Plans Steps to Avoid Fitba' Violence

By PETER DEELEY
The London Observer

LONDON — Generations of Britains, taught to believe that in sport "it's the game that matters, not the winning," are now asking what has happened to the traditional values of fair play in their national game, association football (league soccer).

Each week brings new instances of hooliganism among spectators at soccer grounds. Players are being assaulted and kicked by fans who run on to the field to give vent to their feelings. The vehicles which ferry the teams to and from the grounds are attacked. The referee at a recent London match was carried half-conscious from the field. Special trains which bring visiting fans are regularly wrecked.

In many cases British railways have cancelled these trains, where damage has cost many hundreds of thousands of dollars. But this has merely transferred the trouble to regular train services and onto the roads. Some bus operators in the Midlands are now prepared to run football trips only if the fans are "watched over" by German shepherd dogs and their handlers.

Britain has not yet experienced soccer riots on the scale of that in Vienna this month, which stopped the international match between Greece and Austria, or of the rivalry in Turkey during September, which caused more than 40 deaths. But for fear that this sort of thing may be coming, the British government has now appointed a consultant psychiatrist to find the cause for these disturbances.

Excitement Ignites Alien Action

The psychiatrist, Dr. John Harrington, believes that, in part, the tensions on the field of play are relayed to the spectators. If a star player is involved in a fight his supporters "act out" his troubles on those standing by.

At his Birmingham clinic, Dr. Harrington is interviewing people who have been punished by the courts for hooliganism. His first case was a 25-year-old married man who was fined $70 for attacking a woman fan who had hit him with her handbag.

After his interview, Dr. Harrington summed up: "Here we had a stable young man who goes to a football match and ends up in court. His case tends to confirm my view that there is a group of people—apart from individuals intent on causing trouble—who, in the excitement and provocation of a crowd situation, behave in an entirely alien way."

It seems more than a coincidence that off-field violence has increased since rewards in terms of money and prestige for clubs and players have multiplied. The behavior of players, which shocked millions of British television viewers when they saw film of the World Club championship game between Glasgow Celtic and Racing of Buenos Aires in Montevideo, is seen by referees—often the unhappy targets of the crowds' annoyance—as the spark which kindles rowdyism among spectators.

Lucrative Bonuses Add to Problem

At the top, a soccer player can now earn up to $280 a week, with lucrative bonuses for appearing in international competitions. The stress which the need to succeed is placing on the player is shown by the fact that in the first month of the current season, over 50 players were sent out of the game because of their behavior.

In Britain, disorders have spread far beyond the traditional "black spots" of soccer fanaticism. The annual fixtures between the Glasgow clubs, Rangers and Celtic, have always been marked by violence, but here religion—Protestants versus Catholics—has been the traditional driving force.

In Liverpool, where football is itself almost a religion, "war" songs from the crowds are blamed for inciting violence. The chanting is mostly obscene, but sometimes corruptions of popular tunes are used—the British National Anthem is sung to the words "God save our greatest team."

Fines of as much as $280 and prison terms of up to six months have been imposed by magistrates to try to stamp out the violence.

Where will it end? British clubs are now considering building in the type of protection favored by South American teams. Arsenal, a London team, is planning a four-foot high concrete fence with a no-man's land between the crowds and the playing area. In Glasgow, flags and religious banners are banned at matches. More and more clubs are banning the sale of drink in glass bottles—one of the most common weapons of rowdy fans.

Goalie Nobody Wanted Extends Victory Skein

By CANADIAN PRESS

Roy Edwards, the goalie nobody wanted, Friday carried Detroit Red Wings into the National Hockey League Eastern Division lead with his fourth straight victory since joining the club.

The 30-year-old rookie, called up just before Roger Crozier announced his retirement from hockey, has allowed just a goal a game since moving up from Fort Worth of the Central Professional League.

But, no one really should be surprised at his showing, especially since he opened the season at Fort Worth with three shutouts and hadn't lost in nine games.

The 4-1 victory over Los Angeles Kings, leaders of the Western Division, moved Detroit a point ahead of Toronto Maple Leafs.

GORDIE GETS NO. 11

Veteran Gordie Howe with his 11th goal of the season, gave the Wings a 1-1 tie after Lowell MacDonald had opened scoring for the Kings.

Norm Ullman, Dean Prentice and Alex Delvecchio wrapped it up in the third period, in which they fired 15 of their 34 shots at former team-mate Terry Sawchuk.

Edwards handled 23 of 24 Los Angeles shots safely before 9,498 fans.

Before moving up this season, Edwards allowed just 12 goals in nine games, that included a tie and a fourth shutout in the sixth game.

Veteran Forwards Enjoy Fine Outing

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two Western Hockey League veterans were triggermen Friday as San Diego and Portland both won games.

At San Diego, before 12,777 fans, Willie O'Ree fired three goals—the last one killing a rally — as the Gulls defeated Seattle Totems 6-4.

At Vancouver, before 3,634 fans, Art Jones popped in both goals as the Portland Buckaroos edged the Canucks 2-1.

O'Ree's final goal of the night extended the San Diego lead to 6-3 at 10:49 of the third period and frustrated Seattle, which had scored three goals in a row to pull close.

Ross Perkins, John MacMillan and Al Nicholson were the other San Diego marksmen.

Jones' second goal came with a minute and 30 seconds remaining in a game in which Portland goaltender Marv Edwards stole defensive honors.

Edwards kicked out 41 shots, and was beaten only by Ron Boehm.

Penguin Farmed

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Penguins sent defenceman Bill Speer to their Baltimore Clipper farm club for six days.

VANCOUVER'S POSITION . . . . . . IN NHL PLANNING

Back-Up City, Not Seals' Home

MONTREAL (CP) — Clarence Campbell, National Hockey League president, said Friday that whether Vancouver could be considered for a franchise in any future league expansion remains a matter of speculation.

"You could consider it a back-up city when the building there is completed. But there is no arrangement to this effect at present."

The NHL president said Vancouver lost out in its original bid for an expansion franchise "for reasons of poor financial presentation" and not because the city had no suitable arena to house an NHL team. The city is expected to have a new arena of major league proportions ready for operation this season.

"Los Angeles and St. Louis were the original choices for expansion. After the other four cities were chosen, Baltimore would have had the first option if one of the new franchises had failed," he said.

"However, the Baltimore agreement now has lapsed and no specific areas have been considered."

He ruled out some reports that the Oakland franchise could wind up in Vancouver if the Seals fail to jell in the California city.

The NHL president said it took 40 years to develop to the two-division, 12-team entity that is the NHL today, but the next move would not necessarily take that long.

He said there are a couple of soft spots in the new division as far as attendance figures are concerned, but turnouts at most new rinks had proved satisfactory.

He felt the league should not approach further expansion as the major baseball leagues do in the United States by adding two teams at a time.

"If anything is going to come out of this further expansion, it will be the result of what we learned about allocation of players this year. Nobody wants to add a seventh team and have them perennial losers against the others."

BUT UVIC GIRLS WIN . . . . . . THREE HOCKEY GAMES

Dinos Edge Hoop Vikings

University of Victoria Vikings faded in the second half at Calgary Friday night as University of Alberta Dinosaurs posted a 74-70 overtime victory in the first round of the annual Dinosaur men's basketball tournament.

Vikings led at halftime, but Dinosaurs came back to tie the game at 66-66 at the end of regulation play.

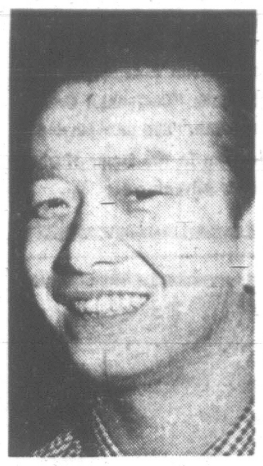
Ken Jackson scored 20 points for Victoria, while Brian Brumwell and John Lauvass each scored 11.

University of Alberta (Edmonton) Golden Bears defeated Calgary Cascades in the other game.

But the Uvic teams weren't the losers in all their out-of-town action.

Uvic topped the field of 22 teams after the first day of play in the three-day tournament being held in Portland by the Evergreen Women's Field Hockey Conference.

Uvic girls bowled over Washington State University 2-0, the Williamette All-Stars 4-1, and Central State College 4-2, to end the first day unbeaten.



BOWLERS OF THE WEEK

Veteran kegler Sheldon Nipp, winner of Bowler-of-the-Week award in first year of annual Times-sponsored contest, is at it again. Nipp collected men's tenpin honors by cracking pins for 192-214-235—641 series at Mayfair Lanes. Completing list of weekly winners is Dot Larson of Duncan, who topped women's tenpin division with slick 178-228-159—565 series at Duncan Bowling Centre.

Vikings on Top As Tudors Fall

Stocker's North Americans handed Esquimalt Tudors a surprise 3-2 defeat Friday, opening the gates for University of Victoria Vikings to move into first place in the Vancouver Island Hockey League.

Vikings had trouble in their own game with Queen's Own Rifles before a league-record crowd of 2,009 at the Sports Centre but rallied for a 9-7 win in the highest scoring game of the season.

Rifles grabbed a 5-2 lead in the first period and added another goal halfway through the second but Vikings fought back to trail by one goal going into the third period. The students dominated play in the final session, outshooting Rifles 15-3.

Ted Sarkissian paced Vikings with two goals while Terry Foreman, Brian Whitten, Mike McAvoy, Paul Bion, Bill Rudyk, George Fuller, and Glyn Harper each scored once.

THREE WITH TWO

Rifles' Dave Stones, Ted Barnes and Mick Brown each scored twice. Des Dejardins scored the other army goal.

Stockers turned back a furious onslaught in the third period to post their upset.

They took a 3-0 lead into the third period on goals by Ernie Carley, Larry Myers and Jim Shkwarok but needed the outstanding goalkeeping of Brian O'Neill to stay in front.

O'Neill turned aside 15 shots in the final period, yielding goals only to Steve Merriman and Ray Gregoire. Tudors goalie Ed Hastings stopped only two shots in the final period.

Aussie Lassies Versatile

The Australian women's field-hockey team, which will play at Royal Roads Sunday, is about to wind up a successful world tour.

Before coming to Canada, they played exhibition games in Germany, England and the United States. Following Sunday's match, the Aussie lassies will go to Japan for more competition before returning home.

Manager of the team, Mrs. Ruby Robinson, M.B.E., is a sportswriter and Radio-TV commentator as well as being a Justice of the Peace. Players' professions range from a policewoman goalie to a window-dresser halfback. The majority of the Aussies, however, are teachers.

Drainage problems at Royal Athletic Park forced a move to drier turf at Royal Roads.

TKO IN 12TH

Still a Growl In Old Tiger . . .

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—The light heavyweight championship in the world of boxing still belongs to Dick Tiger, who today made secretive plans to take it back to the new republic of Biafra in strife-torn Africa.

Tiger, almost as amazing at the age of 38 as another ageless former light heavyweight champion, Archie Moore, successfully defended his crown Friday night when he scored a 12th round technical knockout over a game fighter and the No. 1 challenger, Roger Rouse of Anaconda, Mont.

Tiger Weighed 168¼, Rouse 174½.

Referee Jimmy Olivas didn't bother to count to 10 when, after 22 seconds of the 12th, Roger ran into a solid, short right hand that dumped him to the canvas—his third and final trip to the mat—and spelled finis to his long quest for the 175-pound division championship.

DECKED IN 9th

Tiger turned tiger in the ninth round in the Las Vegas convention centre, flooring Rouse with a powerful left hook to the jaw. Rouse struggled to his feet at about the count of six and took the mandatory eight-count. He absorbed a bad beating but lasted the round.

He also came up with a horrible cut over the right side of his mouth from the left hook. It was to gush blood from then on, masking his face in crimson.

Rouse hit the deck in the 10th, this one from an overhand right; again the mandatory eight, but Roger was still trying to get back.

Rouse made it even close in the 11th until Tiger unleashed a left hook that staggered him at the bell.

Between the 10th and 11th a commission doctor took a long look at Roger's bleeding lip.

"The only punch that hurt me was the last one," Rouse managed to say before he was hustled over to a hospital to get the thing sewed up.

Tiger got a morale boost just before the nationally televised fight. He learned for the first time in nearly six weeks that his wife and family were safe in Biafra, and that he was the father for the seventh time—a girl, seven pounds, born seven days ago.

IN SCOTCH PLAY

13 Under but 'Only' Tied for Golf Lead

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP) — Lee Trevino, rookie pro from Horizon City, Tex. and his partner, Howie Johnson of Palm Springs, Calif., are performing better than Trevino expected.

Yet they're only tied for the lead in third round play Saturday in the $115,000 Scotch golf championship.

"I expected 20 under par or 268 to win the tournament," said Trevino, "but the other pros said I was nuts. It wouldn't take shooting that good to win.

"Now here Howie and I are 13 under after two rounds and we're only tied for the lead."

Trevino and Johnson finished Friday with an eight-under-par 31-33—64 to tie Californians Richard Martinez of Laguna Beach, and Bob Lunn of Sacramento for the 36-hole lead at 131.

Martinez and Lunn, who hadn't done much individually on the PGA tour, were a smash as a team.

CASPER TEAM FADES

Billy Casper and Don Collett, Houston club pro-first-round co-leaders with 66—shot 69 Friday and were third with 135.

George Knudson and Al Balding of Toronto wound up at 139 when they added a 71 to their opening-round 68.

Fifty-five teams of the original 73 continued play Saturday after the 36-hole cut of 146 or better. Forty of these were under par and six others were at par 144.

Top money in the unique event, only one of its kind on the tour, is $22,000 or $11,000 for each winning partner.

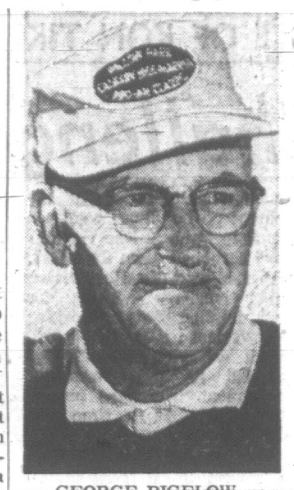
BIGELOW LEADS WAY . . . . . IN SENIORS' MEET

Second Canada's Fate



GEORGE BIGELOW
. . . coming on strong

PINEHURST, N.C. — Dr. George Bigelow of Victoria lopped strokes off his score for the second straight day but Canada still lost ground to a strong United States team in the world seniors golf tournament.

The strong U.S. team picked up another two strokes on second-place Canada to take a 14-stroke lead, 679-693, in the tournament here. Only the best three scores of each four-man team are counted.

Bigelow, 57 and Canadian seniors' champion, became the low Canadian with a fine 74 Friday. Along with earlier rounds of 82 and 76, it gave him a total of 232. He is one stroke ahead of Toronto's Phil Farley, 76-76-81-233.

Farley's 81 and the inability of improvement on that score by Toronto's George Hevenor cost Canada a chance to gain ground. Jack Nash of London, Ont., had a 77 Friday.

Although it seemed improbably that Canada could overtake the U.S. in today's round, the Canucks are virtually assured of second place. They lead third-place Great Britain (706) by 13 strokes.

Individual low scorer of the day was American Bob Kiersky, with a one-over-par 73. Bigelow was next in line.

Powindah Ready to Challenge Vast Pacific

Former Victoria Times reporter John Manning and his wife, Pat, are currently on a 12,000-mile "Centennial Cruise" aboard their tiny sailing ship Powindah. The pair started in England and hope to end their cruise in the Inner Harbor. This is the 49th in a series on their adventures.

By JOHN MANNING

Preparing for a long ocean passage is like studying for an exam—one that will last four or five weeks.

The days prior to commencement of the test are logged with items to review: is the rigging rusty, if so, then it must be wire brushed and oiled; how are the sails, are they wearing around the seams; has the chronometer been rated; is the medicine locker full; how are the food stores; are more spare parts required for the stove; is the fishing tackle in order; is there enough reading material aboard.

List Mounts

The list mounts.

The final day draws nearer.

No part of the ship must be neglected.

The boat must be checked as thoroughly as a commercial airliner before takeoff. The list seems insurmountable yet the price of failing this exam is too high for any one thing to be neglected.

As the jobs are ministered to and ticked off, you gain confidence and faith.

You know that you have studied the weather systems covering an area as long in miles as Canada is broad; you know what your ship can stand, and, more important, what you and your crew can take.

Stake Your Life

With sufficient preparation you know that you can make it. That you are going to make it. You know with as much certainty as a sailor can ever know that the ocean will likely pass you. You stake your life on it.

For Powindah the first such preparation came in a quiet English river, in waters once furrowed by the keels of Nelson's ships.

There her crew prepared for the first examination—the Atlantic Ocean. It took six months of continual work making every minute count, before she was 'checked out'. "She'll do," said Charles, a Cornish shipwright who had worked a full half-century on sailboats. "She'll do."

He was right.

The Atlantic gave her passing grades. Now, on reaching the Galapagos Islands of the Pacific she was faced with a three thousand, one hundred mile crossing to the Marquesan Islands near Tahita. This expanse of water is one of the most deserted in the world; on it a sailboat is smaller than a fly in outer space.

Thrills

But this is what you put to sea for: the thrill of adventure, of preparing for and meeting the test, of accomplishing something on your own. So it was that we sailed Powindah into a lagoon-locked anchorage on Santa Cruz Island, one of the Galapagos archipelago, and began to prepare for her graduate exam with the Pacific.

Besides us were two other ocean voyageurs: the ketch 'Free Flight' and the ketch 'Discovery' both out of Redondo beach, California. Like us, 'Discovery' was bound for the South Sea Islands and was equally concerned with pre-ocean crossing preparations.

The lagoon, which we named 'Goat Harbour' in honour of the many goat dinners we consumed there, was one of those rare anchorages where the boat came completely to rest.

She was beyond clutch of wind and sea.

At night, with two anchors out, one fore and aft, she rested as peacefully as she ever had in the canals of Europe.

Brass Polished

Even in this remote anchorage Powindah flew her national ensign, together with the Royal Victoria Yacht Club burgee, and the courtesy flag of Ecuador. All three boats kept their brass polished, flags flying and paintwork up. They looked as proud and haughty and glittering as three matadors before a corrida.

Like almost every other port previously visited we stayed in the Galapagos longer than anticipated. To conserve both funds and canned food (almost impossible to buy in the Galapagos) we reverted to the ways of the ancient sailing ships. Buying little else than rice, flour and potatoes we took to living off the land and the ocean around us.

Staple Diet

Wild goat became our staple diet. Pressure cooked, roasted, or even barbecued on the beach it tasted as good as lamb and almost as tender. The Mate salted four goats down, first stripping the meat from the bones and then packing them in salt we had collected from ashore.

The ship's boat went out on fishing expeditions, mainly after grouper. Both spear and line were employed; some fish were eaten, others salted for the coming passage. During the time of the full moon we scouted the lagoon for green sea turtles. Since these reptiles are not indigenous and since they are extremely numerous anyone is permitted to catch them. Their meat is better dried and smoked, than salted.

Fed the Parrot

During Powindah's three week sojourn in the lagoon I spent the first four hours of each day in front of a typewriter, with the day beginning at six a.m.

The Mate arose at seven, made breakfast, fed the parrot (who then went on deck to swing in the rigging) and scrubbed down the decks. By noon we were either diving after lobsters, snorkling for fish, hunting goats or working at various jobs on board. Each of these activities carried its own share of enjoyment. The days passed too quickly. Exam time was drawing near.

One Saturday evening after a leisurely meal (goat again) the Mate suddenly put down the book she was reading, a look of concern on her face. "It says there are monsters out there. Giant octopus."

"Who says and where is there?"

"Kon Tiki. The book. That's what I'm reading. We're going the same route they took, aren't we?"

"Yes," I said, "Almost exactly the same."

Surfaced at Night

"Well then, let me read you this: "The National Geographic Society in Washington had shown us reports and dramatic magnesium photographs from an area in the Humbolt Current where monstrous octopuses had their favorite resort and came up on the surface at night ..." she paused.

"Go on," I said, thoroughly shattered out of my after dinner reverie. "What else do they say?"

"They were so voracious that, if one of them fastened on to a piece of meat and remained on the hook, another came up and began to eat its kinsman. They had arms which could make an end of a big shark and set ugly marks on great whales, and a devilish beak like an eagle's hidden among their tentacles."

"Oh," I said.

"The Kon Tiki people carried machetes to chop the octopus arms with," noted Pat.

"We have one."

"Well, that's all right then," she said. "Powindah's prepared for them."

So ended the discussion. In four days time we were to enter the 'examination room', hopefully prepared for whatever question might arise in the next five weeks at sea—even giant octopus.

It can't happen to you.
It can happen to someone in the newspapers, someone on TV. It can even happen to the family right across the street. But to you? Never.

Last year, in B.C. alone, it happened to over two thousand parents who said it couldn't happen to them.

Somehow their children were accidentally poisoned.

Medicines are supposed to save lives, not take them. That's why the prescriptions you receive from your Cunningham dispensaries come in special safety vials.

They're childproof.

As a matter of fact, unless you're an adult and know the combination, you can't open one either. But it's quick and simple once you know how. All it takes is some firm palm pressure on the lid, and a twist to the left. It's easy for you, but not for your child. So dangerous drugs stay locked inside. Out of harm's way.

But remember. Most accidental poisonings still occur not because the child was able to open a poison container but because it was left within his reach in the first place. Please. Store your drugs, cleaning fluids and other household chemicals where your children can't get their hands on them. And just in case, jot down the number of the Poison Control Centre near you: in Vancouver it's 876-3211, in Victoria 386-3131.

You can take the first step towards preventing an accidental poisoning in your home right here and now. Say this out loud to yourself:

"It can happen to me."

Our safety vials will save lives, but we need your help.

Do it for us.

Because we want your children to live.

Because we care.

Afloat In Dry Martini

LONDON — Suddenly it's Sauna.

Everywhere they spring up —discreet man-about-town establishments in London which give the feeling of floating in a dry martini, places where you can get a foreign tan too, health clubs, nature clinics, municipal centres.

And then, at the most authentic level, there's the Finnish seamen's church for saunasick seamen, or for anyone who troubles to go out of the city to the town of Rotherhithe.

"Authentic" — There's the rub. It is hard to see how such an integral part of finnish life can be transplanted without mutation. Perhaps the problem is the same with any foreign imports brought back like holiday souvenirs: drinking mint tea in Primrose Hill instead of the Casbah, serving simple country-style French meals (ah, real peasant pottery!) in a Notting Hill apartment. But Sauna is an even more extreme case.

INNOCENCE

I went to Finland in all innocence, knowing vaguely that sauna, like Sibelius, came from Finland. I arrived in the small town in which I was posted and was presented with my apartment. "And baths?" I asked as I looked at the tubless showerless bathroom.

"There is a sauna in the basement," they said sternly, it seemed no answer then,, but I didn't press the point. It took no time to become aware of the presence of the sauna hovering, like a rich bedridden aunt, somewhere at the heart of every household.

For Sauna in Finland enjoys a remarkable place in social life. After the stage of the little protocol-dictated coffee parties where you have to toy carefully with your cake least you finish to much before or after the oldest person present, and after you've made a formal contract to call one another by your first names and ceremoniously shaken hands on it, you will be asked, "would you like to take sauna with us?"

REVIVING DRINK

Sauna is everything to the Finns. It's a reviving drink after a hard day, a visit to the analyst, weekly family relaxation bond between friends (president Kekkonen has apparantly said that he would never negotiate with a visiting statesman unless they'd been to sauna together first.

One woman claimed with fervor that sauna was the national mother-symbol, but since she herself had been born in sauna her judgment may have been coloured by sentiment.

Sauna births belong, of course, to the country, where, people whisper, life is much more robust than in the towns; unmarried people are even said to take mixed saunas there, I was told.

Town Finns may feel that they've escaped from the crude realities of the countryside, but even for them sauna carries echoes of the placid life of the backwoods.

Fairytale Scenes In Essen

Fairytale Land — Children's Land is the motto of this year's pre-Christmas illuminations in the shopping streets and principal squares in Essen, Germany's Rhur metropolis. Hundreds of thousands of electric lights transform the city's business centre into a fairytale scene until Dec. 31. Known as "Light Weeks," the annual attraction draws many out-of-town visitors.

Canadian Art Exhibit Worth Trip to Seattle

By R. H. GROOMS

A few Canadian artists have successfully demonstrated their competitive abilities to survive the U.S. art scene. The annual exhibition of Northwest artists at Seattle Art Museum Pavilion will be on until Dec. 3.

The jury for this annual show was made up mostly of U.S. academics from the Seattle area. It did include one Canadian juror, Robert S. Alexander, North Vancouver. Among the many winners of prizes and purchase awards, Miss Joan Balzar of West Vancouver and Brent Gifford of New Westminster were recommened by the jury for purchase consideration.

The West Seattle Art Club gave the Katherine B. Baker memorial award of $150 for an artist under 40 to Richard G. Lott of Vancouver. Among the other Canadians successful in getting accepted for exhibition in the show are: sculptor, Leonard Brett, Vancouver; and painters, Professor John Dobereiner, Victoria; Bodo Pfeifer, Vancouver; Marianna Schmidt, Vancouver; Paul G. Wong, Vancouver; and Horst Zander, North Vancouver.

Grooms

About one-third of the work shown, including the Candian examples, are good. The other two-thirds are competent and professional, if not distinguished. This exhibition is an important assessment of what is "in" and gives the viewer a good survey of what is happening today on the current art scene.

Most styles are of the "Op" or optical hard-edge school. The Pop art "reality" images were the least numerous. A few holdovers of the Abstract Expressionist idiom and a small sprinkling of Neo-Surrealist and Neo-Dada mavericks were laced through the offerings.

Some gimmicks or bandwagon items were present. Even jokes were included to amuse the Philistines. No. 11, Ante Chamber, by Rod Burton is one. This is a large black, fur-covered box with a door to transform it into a closet. The experience consists of standing inside on a black foam rubber floor which covers wire triggers. These activate a stobe light once you are inside, which illuminates collage images and the viewer. It transforms you into a parody of old-time flicks.

There are some suggestive sexy items like No. 40, a tempera collage of old Playboy magazine images, lettering, etc. It produces an overwhelming essay in mostly breast forms. A more subtle collage is no. 47, Segmentary Thoughts, which is done with a Japanese feeling arrangement of tissue and rice papers in greys, browns and pinks. The quiet matt tones are very evocative of Japan.

To my mind one of the most powerful and successful works is No. 80, Space Scoop, by D. C. Patha. It is in four huge irregular sections which are separate, but relate, to complete one big composition. The nicest small painting in the Op art vein is No. 14, Elliptical Phalanx, an acrylic in black and white, which sweeps the viewer into a vortex of triangular prisms. The most professional Op painting is No. 6, Black on White on Black, which is a tight and well-controlled design with a small red accent.

The Canadian Bodo Pfeifer has in No. 86, Untitled, acrylic, a real retina wrencher in yellow POW! Another starting item is No. 138. The Love Seat, a sculpture in cedar and plastic, which is a seat for one. This provides a plastic illuminated face which blinks off and on, with which you can make synthetic imagined love. One of the most effective scultpures is No. 121, Combine XXIV, a photo-chemical montage of layers in depth. These show a reclining nude woman who arises in the sequence into a kneeling position.

There is a clever illusion of depth in No. 133, Cube Series '67, a purchase award in plastic and glass. It renders in three dimensional form a cube of smoked glass within a clear plastic cube.

The show is a resounding success and it would be worth a trip to Seattle before Dec. 3 to assess what is really happening now in art. This is the "it" of now.

Wildlife Featured In Disney Special Set Sunday Night

A nature study of the wildlife seldom seen by the average tourist at California's Sequoia National Park will be presented on the NBC network's Walt Disney Wonderful World of Color Sunday night at 6 on Channel 2 and again at 7:30 on Channel 5. Sebastian Cabot will be the narrator.

The colorful nature photography follows the activities of the various denizens of the park during just one day. (The footage, however, was gathered over an 18-month period.)

Some of the animal "heroes" include cougar kittens, marmots, deer mice, deer, and two luckless coyotes who can never seem to do anything right. A tourist family doesn't see what goes on almost under their noses — except to discover the havoc that playful deer mice create in their cabin.

Spy Thriller

Patrick McGoohan stars as the cool, professional British counter-spy John Drake as Secret Agent returns to Channel 5 on Sunday night at 11:05.

In the premiere episode, The Mercenaries, Drake joins a mercenary army whose activities in Africa are the cause of considerable uneasiness in the British war department.

The ruthless group known as Crazy Coote's Commandos appear to have murdered one agent already planted among them. Drake follows clues and finds himself visiting a doctor . . . and one of the doctor's patients, a hypochondriac who also happens to be the prime minister of a newly independent country.

With the prime minister scheduled for a major operation, Drake is on the trail of an ingenious plan to dispose of the official in a danger-fraught conspiracy.

Before he's free, Drake has a final reckoning with the sadistic commandos.

Workshop

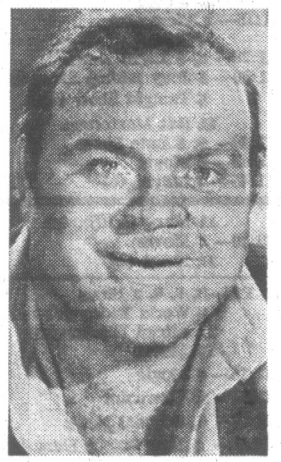
Patricia Peabody Roosevelt, socially prominent author of I Love a Roosevelt appears on the Community Workshop program along with two English experts on church furnishings Sunday morning at 10 in color on Channel 5.

Mrs. Roosevelt, former Seattleite and wife of President Roosevelt's son Elliott, returned to her hometown in September as part of a speaking tour sponsored by her publisher to promote her recently published book. Mrs. Roosevelt's husband, Elliott, is a former Florida Democratic national committeeman, and mayor of Miami Beach from 1964 through 1966.

During her Workshop appearance, Patty Roosevelt gives her own explanation of Elliott's defeat for a third term as mayor in Miami. A good Catholic, she also talks freely about her marriage to a man divorced several times.

Workshop's second segment features the contrast between traditional and modern church trappings presented by two English experts in Seattle for the Episcopal Convention.

Gerald Brasted, chairman, and Francis Coote, secretary of Great Britain's national association of church furnishers display silverware and embroidery, and show slides of English architecture.



POPULAR STAR of Bonanza, Dan Blocker will be seen in usual role Sunday night at 9 on Channels 2, 5, 6.

Noted Singer On

Mahalia Jackson, internationally renowned gospel singer, offers a group of five spirituals on And Joy Is My Witness on Lamp Unto My Feet, Sunday at 8 on Channel 7.

Miss Jackson sings Out of the Depths, The Love of God, How We Got Over, I Wasn't Going to Tell Nobody, and Just a Closer Walk With Thee. The broadcast was taped at Bethel Temple Church in New York City. Dr. George Crothers is the host.

This is the third of four rebroadcasts on Lamp Unto My Feet during November that illustrate the scope of the series as it begins its 20th season on the CBS television network.

JOHN McINTIRE
. . . pursue own vision

Western Star Has Formula For Success

John McIntire long ago adopted Henry David Thoreau's formula for success.

"You make yourself wealthy by making your wants few."

"This is so true," said McIntire, "It's one of the basic essences for making yourself happy in life."

One of the other "basic essences" is the courage to pursue your own vision at all costs.

Symbolic of McIntire's vision is the rugged 800-acre ranch which he and his wife, actress Jeanette Nolan, bought 30 years ago in the wilds of Montana.

Their ranch life corresponds closely to the frontier life as recreated in The Virginian, which finds them portraying Clay and Holly Grainger, on the NBC network.

"We already had a successful radio career going when we bought the ranch," said McIntire. "We were advised to concentrate on our career for 10 years, earn what we could, and then leave and do what we wanted to do."

The McIntires decided against such a plan. Instead, they dropped out periodically and dropped in on their Montana ranch.

"Once we left for two years," he said. "Many times we didn't know if we had a job when we got back to 'civilization.'"

They managed to resume their career successfully each time.

"The reason we didn't wait 10 years is that the so-called rewards of success grow greater," said McIntire. "So do the responsibilities.

You develop a pattern of life that becomes difficult to break. We did not want to compromise—it would have been the end."

The McIntires developed confidence and strength from such repeated action. It became easier, not harder, as time went on.

"We finally had enough of a pattern established to see that we could drop out and start over again and again," said McIntire.

Life on the McIntire ranch is primitive. The McIntires raise their own crops, do their own hunting, fishing and canning. They have no electricity or running water. The closest telephone is 30 miles. The nearest neighbor is nine miles away.

The McIntires have lived there with their children, Tim and Holly, since these were babies, a major portion of each year. The children are grown now and actors in their own right.

Belafonte Special Set

Famed Entertainer Appears Thursday On Hour-Long Show

One of the world's greatest entertainers, the incomparable Harry Belafonte, makes one of his rare television appearances when the O'Keefe Centre presents a special, Thursday night, at 9, in color, on Channels 2 and 6.

The hour-long show also features Harry's guests: South Africa's Miriam Makeba, Esther Marrow, a young American gospel-rock singer discovered by Belafonte and Duke Ellington, and the Belafonte Singers. It is the second in a series of O'Keefe Centre specials, being seen approximately once a month through the CBC-TV 1967-68 season.

"They're good. There's a sense of greater sanity in Canadian TV ... You sing better and you're freer up here. . . ." That's what Belafonte said last summer when he was videotaping the show at CBC Toronto's television Studio 7.

He was especially pleased to be working again with Paddy Sampson, one of the CBC's best television director-producers. Their first show together, presented on CBC-TV's Show of the Week late in 1965, drew rave reviews from the critics.

HIGH-FLYING 58-foot Smokey the Bear will be one of the features of annual U.S. Thanksgiving Day parade in New York Thursday. It will be seen on Channels 7 and 12 at 7 in the morning and on Channel 5 at 9.

Variety called it: "A spellbinding hour of total television." The Toronto Telegram said: "It was one of those hours which reminds one that the best of Canadian television ranks with the world's best."

Belafonte will be heard in several of his audience pleasers, including Sail Away, Ladies, Island in the Sun, and Hold On to Me, Babe. But he'll also sing the deeply moving Those Three Are on My Mind, Pete Seeger's tribute to the three young civil rights workers slain by racists in Philadelphia, Mississippi, in 1964. There'll also be a spectacular calypso production number, Don't Stop de Carnival.

Special on LSD

Documentary on the use and abuse of LSD will be presented Monday night at 7 on Channel 4.

The special color program LSD-25 has been previewed by more than 20 health education teachers, psychologists and physicians in the Pacific Northwest who termed the program "dramatic, realistic," and also "vital viewing" for every parent, every student, junior high through college level, every teacher and all persons concerned about the drug scene and its impact on youth.

In LSD-25, the lysergic acid molecule tells its own story. The film begins with the LSD molecule saying: "I'm a complicated thing, here in complicated times and in complicated places. But now, let me tell you what I really am and what I really do."

It speaks of its unpredictability—that the results of its use are more dependent on the psychological makeup of the user than the acid itself. The private hell of a bum trip where a group of young people find looking into their own minds a terrifying experience, the destructive horror of recurring hallucinations long after the trip is over, the pitiful portrait of a teen-age girl beginning psychiatric care after trying to blow her mind on acid—all these are part of the LSD molecule's story.

Holiday Parades

Giant helium-filled balloons in such familiar shapes as those of Donald Duck, Popeye and Bullwinkle Moose will again highlight the annual parade in New York, one of four parades in color on Thanksgiving Parade Jubilee, Thursday morning at 7 on Channels 7 and 12 and Channel 5 at 9.

The other parades included in the broadcast are in Detroit, the Santa Claus parade in Toronto, and in Philadelphia.

Ever since the inflated cartoon characters first floated through New York on Thanksgiving Day 40 years ago, a parade would be almost unrecognizable without them. Each of the huge creations is costly, running into thousands of dollars, and its detailed construction requires an amazing amoung of artistic ingenuity.

Gauguin in Tahiti

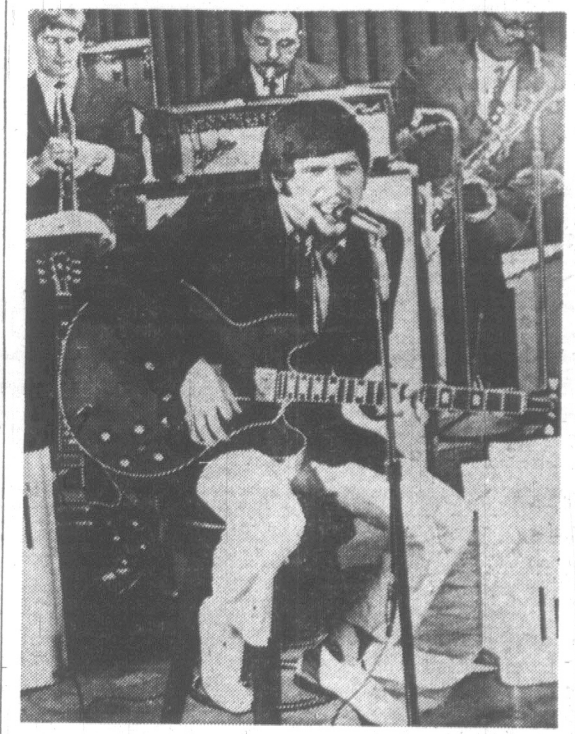
A CBS News special focusing on Gauguin's years in Tahiti, where he created as an artist the paradise he failed to find there as a man, will be presented in color Tuesday night at 10 on Channel 7.

Sir Michael Redgrave will speak the words of Gauguin on the broadcast, which also recalls Cauguin's life in France and the reasons why he deserted his family before leaving for Tahiti.

Produced, directed and written by Martin Carr, the hour special was filmed in France and Tahiti. Many of Gauguin's paintings will be shown, including those from private collections the world over and in museums ranging from the Hermitage in Leningrad to the Metropolitan in New York.

REDGRAVE HONORED

Lynn Redgrave, currently before the cameras for Paramount's Smashing Time, was honored with the British Cinematograph Exhibitors Association's silver Oscar, called the Ceasa, as star of the future.



DOCUMENTARY entitled "One Night Stands" will be presented Tuesday night at 10 on Channel 4. One of the performers will be singer Johnny Rivers, seen performing at the Whisky-A-Go-Go Club on the famed Sunset Strip in Hollywood.

COURTESY WINS ROLE

Bronx cab-driver Milton Millian will make his motion picture debut in The Odd Couple, currently filming on locations in New York, after his selection as the city's most courteous cabbie.

Virtuoso Speaks

"Music competitions have nothing to do with art. They are matches between two bodies. For me to play in a darkened hall with people sitting around writing on pads of paper while I play is devastating."

These are the words of Joseph Fuchs, one of the world's leading violinists and the subject of a penetrating profile, "The Virtuoso Teacher," on the Bell Telephone Hour on Friday night at 10 on Channel 5.

Although the violinist hates "fiddle matches," he spends much of his time when he is not performing, coaching students of the Juilliard School of Music in New York for the world's most formidable competitions. He is internationally recognized as a master music teacher.

However, Fuchs says he never encourages any of his students to enter contests. But since so many concert managers refuse to represent young performers unless they have won a few prizes, he finds himself more and more preparing his students for such events.

FEW SEEK SEPARATION

Only seven per cent of French Canadians in Quebec favor separation from Canada, a special copyright survey conducted for CBC News by Opinion Research Corp. Ltd. revealed.

SHRAPNEL TORE HOLE IN HEART

He Refused to Die—Twice

ALIVE OR DEAD? That was the big question facing Lieut. T. E. Kelly, U.S. Navy, on loan to Canada and recently sent to beach near Estevan Point on Island's west coast where this British mine was washed up. Turned out the mine wouldn't have blown his hat off. It was an empty shell used for minesweeping drill. But the lieutenant and two CPOs from Esquimalt exploded it with charges, from 1,000 yards distance, before knowing for sure. Mine was spotted by ex-navy helicopter pilot. (DND)

DA NANG, Vietnam (AP) — U.S. Navy doctors said a 20-year-old marine "died twice" of a shrapnel wound in the heart but was revived and now is recovering.

The youth was identified as Cpl. Clifford R. Hiteshew of Flint, Mich.

The navy surgeon who directed the operation in a field aid room, Dr. Howard Carpenter, said: "People have had holes in their heart and survived but I have never heard of them doing it under these circumstances."

Carpenter added that Hiteshew "was just tough—he refused to die."

Hiteshew's double brush with death occurred Nov. 7 when an 81-millimetre mortar shell accidentally exploded at the Con Thien combat base and shrapnel tore into his body.

HIT HEART

One jagged piece of metal ripped a hole the size of a quarter in the left ventricle of his heart, doctors said.

Medical corpsmen said Hiteshew "died" the first time as he was being carried to the aid station in Dong Ha, 10 miles south of Con Thien.

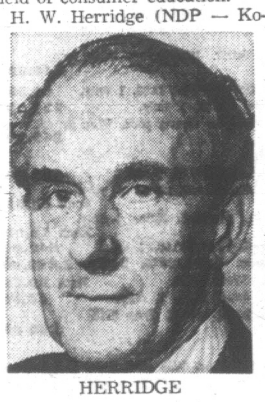
He was revived by mouth-to-mouth resuscitation but stopped breathing again as he was being x-rayed. A team of surgeons, not taking time to scrub up or don their operating gloves, began the operation while Hiteshew was still on the stretcher.

As corpsmen worked to keep the patient breathing, doctors closed the wound in his heart with six stitches. Three hours later, they performed a tracheotomy to aid Hiteshew's breathing.

'Spend Money Wisely' Purpose of Department

OTTAWA (CP) — The proposed federal department of consumer and corporate affairs should help people of modest means learn to spend their money more wisely, it was contended in Parliament Friday.

Gerard Loiselle (L—Montreal St. Anne), speaking during Commons debate on third and final reading of the bill to set up the department, said the department could do much "in the field of consumer education."



HERRIDGE
. . . keep prices down

H. W. Herridge (NDP — Kootenay West) said the teaching of better buying habits would be a big step towards keeping prices down to reasonable levels.

The bill ran into heavy criticism from opposition MPs and three amendments, all aimed at defining the proposed department's task with more precision, were introduced shortly before the Commons rose. One of them would put the government in the drug-manufacturing business.

Debate on the bill is expected to resume late next week.

The Commons will deal Monday and Tuesday with motions to provide money for government expenditures. These motions also provide the opposition with an opportunity to bring up any subject for debate.

Mr. Loiselle, who made a sharp attack on the advertising of expensive toys during the Christmas season, said the consumer "has to be taught how to plan her budget," particularly in a modest household. "She must be shown how to save money, how to choose products, how to establish priorities among the family's needs."

Mr. Herridge said no greater advance could be made than "the provision of information and education in an attempt to establish better buying habits on the part of those who lack such habits at the present time."

Erik Nielsen (PC—Yukon) moved that the minister of consumer and corporate affairs be given power to investigate price increases and required to report to Parliament "with appropriate recommendations."

Grace MacInnis NDP—Vancouver - Kingsway) moved the establishment of a prices review board.

The Commons approved, by voice vote, an amendment moved by Herb Gray (L—Essex West) to change the department's name to consumer and corporate affairs, reversing the positions of the words consumer and corporate. Mr. Gray suggested this was more appropriate since the main purpose of the new department seemed to be to serve the interests of consumers.

Mr. Herridge called it "a good amendment." Mr. Nielsen said it "is as phoney as the bill," and Howard Johnston (SC—Okanagan - Revelstoke) agreed. The Yukon Conservative said later, on presenting his own amendment, that changes are needed that will put teeth in the bill.

Lifers Parole Out For First 10 Years

OTTAWA (CP) — Parole for those serving a life sentence for capital murder is not considered before 10 years of the sentence have been served, Solicitor-General Pennell said in the Commons Friday.

He was answering questions by Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) and David Pugh (PC— Okanagan-Boundary).

Both arose from charges Thursday night, during debate on a bill to limit capital punishment, that life under the Liberal government has meant an average term of eight years, 10 months and one day.

Ralph Cowan (L—York-Humber), who gave the figure, said he worked it out by averaging the terms served by 13 paroled men whose death sentences had been commuted to life.

Mr. Knowles said that in view of this, would the cabinet reconsider the case for parole of Steven Truscott. Mr. Pennell has said parole for Truscott, imprisoned in 1959 for strangling a 12-year-old girl, cannot be considered until June, 1969. Truscott was 14 in 1959.

He told Mr. Knowles that the Cowan figures applied to cases dealt with before changes in the Parole Act.

Mr. Pugh asked if legislation will be introduced to define the term life sentence in relation to capital murder.

Mr. Pennell said the Parole Act changes stipulate that a term of 10 years must be served before the parole board can review a case. If its decision was favorable, the case was then referred to cabinet for a final decision on whether the convict should be released.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1967 —PAGE 23

Arthur Mayse

A time comes in the lives of childed but dogless couples when they begin to emerge from the slave - aspects of parenthood into a freedom that hasn't been theirs for many a year. It happens, though, that Win and I are possessed by a lively Labrador who needs plenty of exercise, and insists that we share his morning calisthenics.

I've heard of people, and Napoleon was one of them, who leap from their beds at the crack of dawn, eager to get the new day rolling.

But there was only one Bonaparte, for which fact we have cause to be grateful, and sleep is dearest to us in those last few minutes before the alarm cuts loose.

While the summons is still half an hour away, in pads our dog Lancer. He whines imperiously. When that doesn't work, he pokes his muzzle into the handiest face, and bestows lavish kisses.

The only way to stop his pestering is to get up and be taken for a walk.

Once out into the autumn grey, however, the effort becomes rewarding.

This is not the early-morning world of summer, where birds sing under a luminous sky. It is very still, and its colors are mostly subdued. A rockery evergreen gleams in cold silver, every needle beaded with overnight rain. Spiderwork is everywhere, and below the garden, a maple that has clung to its foliage stands yellow in the weeping mist.

★

Lancer has not paused to test the quality of the day. He's off and running with never a backward look, to check his network of dog-trots.

We go down more sedately, jogging in the rubber boots that November demands, along a trail carpeted solid with golden leaves. These are scarcely scuffed; the young feet that kept the trail brown in August will be under school desks in an hour or so.

The flanking brush is leafless; we can see through the thickets to the arbutus clump that flaunts its strong reds and greens no matter what the season.

We can even glimpse the ridged column of a fir tree that may, if legend has truth to back it, have seen Drake's Golden Hind pass on the strait below.

Hawks visit that tree, and so does the increasingly rare eagle. Once, studying it from the house through glasses, I spotted a raccoon napping in the cradle of its shattered top. Significantly, hen-pheasant feathers have been shed alongside the trail: were they scattered there late yesterday or only a few minutes ago by a masked marauder?

Here comes Lancer, bursting out of the up-trail bush. He is laughing all over his face, and he runs so fast that his flying hind-legs pass his backward-streaming ears. Dogs don't stay long away from their people. Lancer has blown off his excess energy but he has plenty left for a beach run and a swim.

★

We have come to the stage of the year when the flats are rarely exposed by day. The tide makes its long fall in the night hours; only a narrow strip of shingle lies bare between the sea and the drift logs.

Wintering ducks share the cove with seagulls. The pair of loons that arrived with October cruise closer in than usual. They are large sleek birds, dark with white throat-patches and dagger beaks. While we are still half the curve of the beach away, they taxi off across the water with a great beating of wings that seem too small for their bodies.

Lancer eyes them with interest, but contents himself with a swim for a thrown stick. He grabs it, turns with a fine swirl of his tail, and lunges toward the shore.

It's a temptation to stay down—peel ruffs of shavings around cedar sticks, and coax a beach fire into life. But we're overdue above, and such indulgence is not for work-days.

Anyway, Lancer's had his exercise. He will be content now to tag after Win at her housework until it's time to demand his evening stroll.

UVIC PRESIDENT NAMED TO VANIER INSTITUTE

Dr. Malcolm Taylor, president of the University of Victoria, and Rev. Robert Gracey of Nanaimo today were named to the Vanier Institute of the Family.

They were among 20 new members announced at the institute's third annual meeting in Ottawa, raising the total membership to 133.

$30 Million Hospital Bill Facing Greater Victoria

INQUIRING CAMERA doesn't seem to bother student teacher Sharell Watts or Grade 5 class at Macauley elementary school. It's all in a good cause —producing better teachers and therefore better students. Cameraman is Jim Fowles, second year student at Uvic, and monitor to his right helps him ensure he is getting the TV picture he wants. Tape of lesson will be replayed later and supervisor will help student teacher polish instruction technique. (Irving Strickland Photos)

TV CAMERA HELPS CORRECT TEACHER FAULTS

'Gift' to See Themselves

By DON VIPOND
Education Reporter

It was Robbie Burns, 200 years ago, who lamented no gift to see ourselves as others see us.

It would save a lot of blunders and a few foolish notions, he suggested.

That "gift" has now arrived.

It's in the form of a small and highly portable TV camera in the hands of the faculty of education at the University of Victoria.

And it's roaming elementary schools in Greater Victoria eyeing student teachers for the same advantages Robbie foresaw.

●

Students training for teaching can see themselves as others see them.

This can be a lesson in itself. And with help from supervising teachers and the education faculty they can polish their techniques, correct faults they might never have known.

Dr. Winston Eshleman joined the faculty of education this year as a specialist in audio-visual technology.

"Teaching is a performing art, like drama or athletics," he says. "If an actor or athlete can benefit from watching himself perform it seems to me a teacher can gain from self-appraisal too."

The mini-TV equipment used in teacher training is a versatile tool with many applications in education.

●

It can video tape a student teacher at work and the tape can then be played back through the equivalent of a small TV set.

The picture can be put on at slow motion or stopped while an instructor pinpoints a situation. The tapes can be erased and used indefinitely.

The camera can be used to record expert teachers at work and classes then watch how it's done through bigger monitors.

The faculty this year has made a 50-minute tape on the library and this has been operation of the university's library and this has been scanned by the 60 different freshman English classes.

Many students didn't know how a university library works, says Dr. Eshleman. Imagine the problem taking groups of new students there and having a librarian go over the routine time and again ad nauseum?

The day may come when a central television room at the university with a bank of taped educative material may be tapped to feed a variety of programs into classrooms across the campus.

In the meantime, plans are under way to wire 17 classrooms with audio-visual cables and Dr. Eshleman hopes by next summer an acoustically-treated studio with control console might be a reality.

STOP ACTION is what the video tape of the educational TV camera gives and here Dr. Leslie Crawford, supervisor of student teachers on Uvic's faculty of education, uses the monitor to illustrate a point with student teacher Jean Gardner (centre) while teacher Susan Watson watches the all-seeing camera caught as well. TV. can also be used to tape veteran teachers at work for later viewing by classes of student teachers.

COMMISSION DROPS FOUR PER CENT

Hairdressers Take Pay Cut

Many Victoria hairdressing shops have cut the percentage employees earn.

This was disclosed today to The Times and later confirmed by Ralph Martino, president of the Victoria Styling Council.

Hairdressers commission is dropping from 47 per cent to 43 per cent of the amount of money they bring into the shops.

Mr. Martino said a good hairdresser works on her own, names her own hours and "in effect they are renting a place from us."

The recent provincial statutory holiday regulation providing eight paid holidays a year was "a big stab, so we just cannot afford it." Some hairdressers were making $40 to $50 a day, he said.

He said a $30,000 investment in a hairdressing shop and eight operators meant the owner makes 3½ to four per cent a year and "even the banks pay more interest."

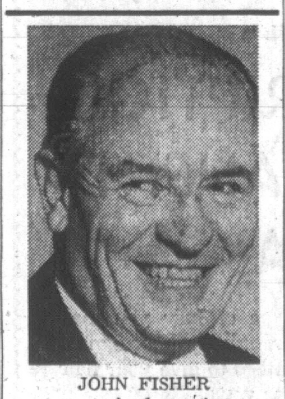
He described hairdressing as a "luxury, not a necessity," in arguing against increasing prices to the customer.

The Times' informant said his wife, a hairdresser, made $5,640 a year under the old percentage but it will be $5,160 under the new one.

"The 1930s was the last time I heard of pay cuts," he said.

"There's a difference between holding down (pay raises) and going down. It's the general injustice to all employees rather than one person."

The man said one shop owner argued that costs have gone up, but he replied that the only increase is in Canada Pension and statutory holiday with pay regulations because employees were on a fixed percentage for years.



JOHN FISHER
. . . to lead marchers

It May Well Be An Awesome Sight

People who think Canada's Centennial party all but ended with Expo are in for a rude awakening next Saturday.

There's a ground swell of enthusiasm in the air that suggests Victoria is going to follow other cities across Canada in making the Miles for Millions march the day to remember this year.

Picture 5,000 to 10,000 persons on the march along Government Street — more or less at one time! It's an awesome thought but it's likely to happen.

Appeal of the Miles for Millions march is its simplicity. It's for everyone because all you have to do is be able to walk.

That's not quite right either. In Winnipeg earlier this year a man covered the full route, over 30 miles, in a wheelchair. Another man, on crutches, joined marchers.

★ ★ ★

Almost half a million Canadians will have joined in this youth project to send mobile classrooms to developing nations before the year is out.

And it's ironical so few Canadians will ever know how strongly their countrymen have backed each other, says Rev. Walter McLean, deputy director of the Centennial International Development program.

Elderly people, families, officials and crowds of youngsters have turned out by the thousands in city after city to march.

But national news media have never given the marches much attention, although local coverage has been fabulous, he said.

The march works this way.

Volunteers do the marching after lining up "sponsors" who agree to contribute so much for every mile they walk.

★ ★ ★

Greater Victoria school board chairman Peter Bunn, for example, has agreed to contribute $1 for each mile his two Oak Bay student volunteers march.

The route, measures 26½ miles through Greater Victoria.

The march starts at 8.30 a.m. in front of the Legislative Buildings and there are 13 check points where marchers get their cards stamped before the finish, back at the starting line.

Leading off will be Centennial Commissioner John Fisher, known as "Mr. Canada," and with him will be Mayor Hugh Stephen and Reeve Hugh Curtis who have challenged each other.

New St. Joseph's At Royal Oak Likely

By JIM HUME
Times City Hall Reporter

Greater Victoria will be faced with a minimum hospital bill of $30 million in the spring of 1968.

Toronto-based Dr. Harvey Agnew, now conducting a comprehensive survey into the area's hospital bed needs, will have his report ready for presentation next April.

But local experts say they don't need to wait for the report to know that the news will be bad.

They stress it is already an established fact that Victoria's bed shortage is more acute than in many parts of the country. And they add the sobering thought that of the 1,150 acute beds available in the area, some 900 are obsolete or of questionable value.

While admitting the situation is grave, hospital officials are reluctant to comment prior to the publication of Dr. Agnew's report.

But they are prepared to list some frightening figures indicating the seriousness of the predicament facing Greater Victoria in the immediate future.

Conservative estimators list the price of a new hospital bed at $30,000. (In Vancouver the cost of a new bed for the Vancouver General has been established at $60,000 a bed.)

At the $30,000 figure it would cost Greater Victoria $27 million to cancel out existing obsolescent beds and replace the units with a modern plant and equipment.

At St. Joseph's Hospital alone it is estimated that $15 million would be required to bring the hospital up to modern, acceptable standards.

"And even after we had spent the $15 million we would still have the old St. Joseph's, a better one, true, but still a building that is not designed for modern hospital needs," says one St. Joseph's official.

The answer? Dr. Agnew may have it in the spring.

Conversion for St. Joseph's

One of the suggestions he could make is that a new 500-bed St. Joseph's be built in the Royal Oak area while the existing hospital be converted into an extended care and chronic care centre.

"There are really three alternatives," says one expert.

"We could, at a cost of around $20 million, build a new hospital at Royal Oak and bring St. Joseph's and Jubilee up to standard.

"But three hospitals in the area would create their own major problems.

"Doctors are already hard pressed for time. I don't think it would be physically possible for them to visit three hospitals each day and still find time for their office practice.

"A third acute care hospital would also create a tremendous staffing problem because nurses and technicians are not exactly in abundant supply.

"I feel sure that if it was decided to build a third acute care hospital doctors would have to decide which two they would use to the detriment of the third. And I am also sure that both Jubilee and St. Joseph's would be hit hard by lack of staff."

The second suggestion has already been mentioned: Convert St. Joseph's into an extended care hospital while building a new acute care St. Joseph's.

Have They Enough Experience?

The third alternative: Build a new Rest Haven Hospital to be administered by the Seventh Day Adventists while still converting St. Joseph's to an extended care hospital.

"The only thing worrying me about the last suggestion may be unfounded," said one local doctor. "Rest Haven at Sidney is just a small hospital and easy to administer. I am just wondering if the people who have been running it for so many years have the administrative skills to take over a highly complex 500-bed operation.

"And I wonder too if it would be morally right for the community to turn its back on the Sisters of St. Ann who for close to 100 years have devoted their lives to hospital work for the benefit of the people of Victoria."

Whichever alternative Dr. Agnew suggests the bill will remain unchanged.

A new 500-bed hospital is a must if the existing intolerable situation is to be relieved and the cost will be over $20 million.

The modernization of areas of the Jubilee and St. Joseph's would push the total bill to almost double that total.

And the extended and chronic care problem—one of the greatest causes of the present bed shortage—would remain unsolved.

"I think we are going to have to face it, a new St. Joseph's in the Royal Oak area will have to be the answer. It will be the most economical in the long run and by converting the existing plant to an extended care centre the bed shortage would be dramatically relieved," said one expert.

"But even doing it that way the new hospital, the urgent changes needed at Jubilee and the conversion of St. Joseph's will mean expenditures in excess of $30 million."

Costs Soared Since 1964

Three years ago, in 1964, the Victoria and District Hospitals' Planning Council came up with some figures on funds required to bring existing hospital plants up to reasonable modern standards.

- St. Joseph's Hospital — $12,576,000.
- Royal Jubilee Hospital — $8,204,600.
- Rest Haven Hospital — $2,500,000.
- Gorge Road Hospital — $456,000.
- Queen Alexandra Solarium — $35,000.
- A new 200 bed hospital — $4,000,000.

But that was three years ago and construction costs have soared since that $27,773,200 cost figure was made public.

In addition the provincial government has stated that the community needs between 500 and 550 new extended care beds if the present situation is to be eased.

Mayor Hugh Stephen, long a student of the growing hospital bed crisis, has stated on several occasions that he feels a $30 million bill will be rock bottom when the situation is eventually faced.

"I feel in my own mind that it is going to cost us a minimum of between $30 and $35 million," he said recently.

"But this is a task we have to face," he added. "Whatever solution Dr. Agnew comes up with we have to realize that we have a tremendous task ahead of us."

Food Stall Needs Truck

Food, money and a truck are needed for this month's free food stall, convenor Mrs. Joan Price said Friday.

The truck is required to take donations from city wholesalers to the stall to be held Nov. 25.

Accepting calls for donations and pickups this month is Mrs. Marion Lingard at 385-0116.

Speedy Trip To Court

A young hit-and-run driver today was fined a total of $195 on three charges.

David Parsons, 19, of 17 Boyd St., pleaded guilty to careless driving, failing to remain at the scene of an accident, and being a minor in possession of alcohol.

Central court was told Parsons' car struck a parked car on Courtney Street Friday. Police said he then drove off at a high speed and was finally stopped at Boyd and Dallas.

They said while they talked to Parsons, a bottle of alcohol fell from his jacket onto the front seat.

Magistrate Harold Alder fined Parsons $75 for careless driving, $100 for leaving the accident scene, and $20 for possession of alcohol. His driver's licence was suspended.

'Dangerous' Powder Withdrawn

Modelling powder, described by Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread as "potentially dangerous," has been withdrawn from Victoria schools.

The asbestos powder is used to make a modelling paste by mixing it with water but Greater Victoria's medical health officer said the fibres in the dry powder can cause irritation in the lungs.

Order to discontinue use of the powder in Victoria schools was issued Friday by superintendent Joseph Chell and Harold O'Donnell, supervisor of elementary education.

Mr. O'Donnell said that use of the powder has been discontinued and "any further action will depend on Dr. Whitbread."

A WOMAN'S VIEWPOINT

By Pat Dufour

Victoria is reputed to have more than her fair share of Canada's wealthy citizens. She also has an alarming number of residents whose main objective in life is to keep their necks above financial chaos.

In my last column I wrote about the widows and deserted wives . . . we have hundreds of them . . . who fight loosing battles in a struggle to rent a home that will provide them and their children with decent accommodation. So far, our city has failed to come to grips with the situation. Low-cost rental housing is at a premium, squeezed into almost non-existence by landlords who take advantage of revised federal action which permits old homes to be bought with nationally-sponsored mortgages, and other landlords who imitate bandits with the rents they demand for houses no better than hovels.

Victoria, under its urban renewal plan, intends to revive the Rose-Blanshard area with the building of low-cost housing, with costs being split three ways, 75 per cent federally, and the rest equally shared by the provincial and civic bodies. But these homes won't be ready for about 18 months and, for mothers who are being strangled in financial straight-jackets, this can seem as long as eternity.

Saanich, to my mind, has been far more realistic in her approach to the housing crisis. Under the same financing, Saanich is buying about 50 homes in the area and having them made suitable for renting at a nominal cost. Not only does the problem receive better treatment this way, it also eliminates the risk of producing ghetto-like conditions, brought about by solid masses of uniformly built houses.

Welfare Aid Should Be Increased

Reg Clarkson, chairman of the social assistance committee for the British Columbia Social Workers' Association, has his own ideas on how the problem should be solved. He believes that welfare aid should be increased in order to allow these desperate women to rent reasonable accommodation.

As he says, "Apart from hundreds of deserted wives, there are many widows who are faced with this problem. Their search must be soul-destroying."

Mr. Clarkson is more conversant with the situation than most people. One of his voluntary jobs is that of executive secretary for the local Low Income Group.

Asked if there should be a return to rent control, Mr. Clarkson says he's reluctant to advocate rigid regimentation. However, he does suggest that a sensible approach would be to have minimum control with certain coverage for house owners that would enable them to apply for rental increases at regular periods of approximately two years. He feels that any control on rents should be geared to make it difficult for landlords to evict through repeated rent increases.

Mr. Clarkson affirms that the greatest need of all is the development of social consciousness and revision of short-view policies of welfare agencies.

He cites one of many examples. "I know a mother who was left to bring up her children alone. She had had one year of nursing and if it had been possible for her to receive enough help she could have completed her training, cared for her family, and become a useful citizen. Instead, she was forced to endure nine years of misery before her children were old enough to be left and she could finish the education that would have allowed her pride and independence so many years before."

Keith Birch, assistant municipal planner for Saanich, credits Frank Heaton, the municipality's former director of welfare, for much of the drive that ended in Saanich approaching the provincial government and starting the low-rental housing problem now in effect.

Mr. Birch is well acquainted with the problem of low cost housing, having lived most of his life in England, where congested areas and dense population has made this a perennial dilemma.

They Could Turn Into Ghettos

He agrees with Mr. Clarkson that council housing projects, which have been a way of life for thousands in England, run the risk of producing ghettos. Pride, too, is hard to maintain when you live in a long row of "dolls' houses", each like the other.

Perhaps it's the Englishman's traditional love of owning his own home that spiked one imaginative program carried out by the Greater London Council.

Mr. Birch tells me that the council allows a yearly budget of 75 million pounds for granting of mortgages to people who would not qualify under the terms of conventional mortgage houses, financial companies and banks. Money is also assigned for home improvements. As Mr. Birch says, "Many English houses lack what we consider basic facilities. Money is provided for the installation of bathrooms and other amenities."

These two projects, to my mind, are practical evidence of social consciousness at work. I have always disagreed with those who consider Victoria to be a "little bit of Olde England." But, in this case, a little emulation would not be amiss.

The real estate board's decision to go ahead with a multiple listing service for rentals this week, after a request from Mayor Hugh Stephen, is a step in the right direction. But, if we are realistic, we must admit that it's still a very short advance.

There's not much point in being able to know where houses can be rented, if your budget prevents you from taking advantage of such a service. It's also of little comfort to live in one of the most beautiful of Canadian cities if you exist under the threat of repeated evictions.

Other cities, and countries, have taken decisive measures in tackling the problem of low-cost housing. It's high time we gave it the attention it merits. Even if we move now, it may already be too late for the hundreds of women and thousands of children who cry out for understanding . . . and action.

Wedding Reception Becomes Last Social Event at Historic Manor

The last social occasion before Craigflower Manor becomes a federally-sponsored museum was held there last evening when Mr. and Mrs. David Paul Thompson celebrated their wedding reception, after a ceremony in St. Joseph's Church.

The groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald A. Thompson, have made the manor their home for several years, and also operated it as a private historic site.

The bride, the former Connie Marie Cardin, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph D. Cardin, 820 Gorge Road.

The bride carried a white missal, topped with a white gardenia, carnations and ivy with ribbon streamers, when she arrived at the church.

Given in marriage by her father, she was lovely in a gown of ligoda styled in a cage design with sleeves ending in lily points. Re-embroidered Venise lace appliques encircled the bateau neckline and a full train, dramatized with a row of bridal buttons, swept back from the shoulders. Her hand-rolled veil of silk illusion misted from a norganza floral headpiece.

The church was decorated with chrysanthemums for the occasion. Fr. Richard Caldwell officiated and the organist was Clement Mann.

Mrs. Lawrence Bone was matron of honor and Miss Rosemary Cardin, the bride's sister, was bridesmaid. They wore gowns of powder blue chiffon over taffeta styled on empire lines with self-fabric flower whimsies and tulle en tone. They carried white roses accented with silver in their bouquets.

Lawrence Bone acted as best man and Mike Cardin, the bride's cousin, ushered the guests.

At the reception following in Craigflower Manor a two-tier wedding cake centred the head table. The fall theme was continued in decorations of gold and bronze chrysanthemums and antique brass candelabra.

Paul Morneau proposed the toast to the bride.

Travelling to Victoria for the service were Mrs. G. B. Patterson, Calgary; Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Howie, Mrs. Susan Landrauville, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Estergaard, all of Vancouver.

For travelling on honeymoon to the provincial mainland the bride chose a bone shaded English wool suit with brown alligator accessories. A corsage of salmon-pink and brown-toned roses completed her costume.

On their return the newlyweds will make their home at 1624 Hollywood Crescent.

Rehabilitation Services Are a Community Concern

Robert W. Dudley, manager and director of rehabilitation at Goodwill Enterprises, described rehabilitation as working with "a chronic condition which can be improved but not eliminated" when he addressed the University Women's Club at their recent meeting.

Stressing that it is a community responsibility to provide rehabilitation services, Mr. Dudley said that the teaching of new skills is tailored to the "total person."

In describing Goodwill Enterprises he explained that it operates on an experimental basis as a "transient sheltered workshop . . . not interested in keeping a static work force," as revealed by its 50 per cent turnover in staff.

Goodwill Enterprises recruits persons who have been repeatedly rejected by employers, provides physical, psychological and vocational training, raises personal capabilities to the optimum level, but does not necessarily attempt to provide outside employment. Training in 25 different skills is provided at the centre.

Mrs. Vincent W. Smith introduced the speaker and he was thanked by Mrs. R. G. Hobson.

Miss Ethel C. Hopkins reported on the Association of Women Electors of Greater Victoria.

Mrs. J. W. McCammon, president, called for the resuscitation of the public affairs committee so that it might study such questions as the need for a Hansard in the provincial legislative assembly.

Mrs. J. S. Sanderson asked members to study the Carter report on taxation.

Miss Margaret Lowe, membership convener, introduced new members Mrs. Edna Borg, Miss Helen V. Brown, Mrs. H. E. Dishaw, Mrs. T. C. Jain, Mrs. F. Mayne, Mrs. Judith Mills, Mrs. A. C. Riddiford.

Refreshments were arranged and served by Mrs. A. B. Hall, Mrs. G. E. Simmons, Mrs. J. E. N. Flanagan, Mrs. J. F. Muir, Mrs. J. M. Kennaird, Mrs. C. J. Calder and Miss Marilyn Berry.

Doing The Town

with DOROTHY FRASER

The girl in the grey flannel dress . . .

Who but the Europeans would have thought of combining grey flannel with glitter . . . for everything from cocktail parties to a formal ball? . . . Well, that's just what they've done . . . and you wouldn't believe what models of understated elegance these grey flannel dresses are! . . . We saw several examples at the Madam and Eve Shop last week . . . and can only say, wow!! . . . They're sophisticated (and therefore not meant for the frilly-type girl, who'll probably be happier in chiffon) . . . Made by Gordi, one of these grey dresses has plain round neck, A-line skirt with large inverted pleat in front, and six rows of tiny rhinestones running high under the bust . . . Sizes 9 to 13 . . . Another is designed on straighter lines, absolutely plain except for the big rhinestone buckle on the wide belt . . . When fullness is gathered in by the belt it gives a very new, chic look . . . We didn't see the long formal gown with restrained rhinestone trim, but it may well have arrived by now . . . More of these expected . . . Still grey, but this time a Gordi coat . . . very beautiful and elegant with its stand-up collar and grey lamb trim down front and around the hem . . . Madam and Eve Shop, Trounce Alley, 383-7177.

Whether it's a touch of print or a dash of solid, Ernst's nightwear is guaranteed to be different. The ones shown here are typical of his creations.

In Step With Style — By Nona Damaske

MAN'S HOBBY BECAME A CAREER

CALIFORNIA—An unlimited selection of gorgeous ties is many a man's dream but when faced with a choice of one from a collection of 500,000 the dream could well become a nightmare.

Damaske

Following the California Fashion Creator shows at The Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles and the Men's Apparel Guild show at the Hotel del Coronado in Coronado, 20 fashion editors were guests of Beall J. Ernst for an overnight stay in San Francisco.

On a sunny Sunday morning in the magnificent new plant of Ernst of San Francisco, just one block from the Bay at the foot of the San Francisco-Oakland Bay bridge, we were greeted by Beall Ernst and members of his executive staff.

Between 5,000 and 6,000 ties are produced each day in the bright, spotlessly clean plant.

This is a firm that literally "grew like Topsy." Thirteen years ago, unable to find ties that he liked, Ernst began to design his own, just as a hobby, at first.

He is a naturally artistic man, and the exercise of his imagination quickly produced some strikingly original designs. His friends immediately began noticing that his neckties were not only unusual but beautiful; and in practically no time at all he was besieged with requests for ties just like his. Good naturedly enough, he began to fill orders, making up special designs. But he did not anticipate what was coming, for very shortly he had a full time business on his hands. Beall J. Ernst built his necktie empire from a weekend hobby and attic operation in his Los Gatos home, into the biggest tie-making business in the West.

His selection of fabrics played a great part in his success story. Ignoring the usual tie fabrics, he searched instead for exotic hand-woven fabrics from all over the world. Dress materials and decorator designs, raw silks, hand blocked, light weight wool, fine Scalamandre silks, cashmerized cotton and even burlap all found their way into his collection. Today, with one of the nation's leading mills at his disposal, Ernst creates his own special weaves and textures and prints. With these fabrics, Ernst turns out a variety of stripings, an endless stream of solids and prints in subtle shadings and color combinations.

Following our tour of the plant we were driven to the home of Beall J. Ernst which sits high in the hills of Tiburon, overlooking the ocean. Close to a 100 guests gathered for cocktails, a fashion show and dinner. The show "Fashions Oriented West" introduced Mr. Ernst's latest adventure into fashion. His love of beautiful fabrics inspired him to diversify his designing talents.

The Ernst label will now be found on women's shifts, Happi coats for men and women, outrigger shirts, turnabout dickies, hats, Ascots, tote bags, coats, pillows, linens and an entire line of ski accessories.

ODDS AND ENDS

Following a busy week of presentations for the fashion press many California designers were caught in the whirl of arranging for a show of California garments at the United States Embassy in Mexico City. Now that our own Expo has come to an end the next exciting event seems to be the World Games in Mexico.

In this area there is much excitement and publicity concerning the arrival of the Queen Mary in Long Beach.

"Gone With the Wind" is being shown in 70 mm. wide screen and full stereophonic sound at one of Los Angeles' beautiful old theatres, The Carthay Circle. I enjoyed the original release in 1939 but now 28 years later, I must say, I appreciated the great film even more. It was somewhat sad however to realize how many of the stars are no longer with us.

HOPPING GUIDE

Lotus Candle-Stick In Burnished Brass

By Penny Saver

Candles make a difference to any room. Plain or fancy, they ust be properly placed and properly based. My personal vorites are the tall ones — not the very thin candles that sit in roups of a dozen or more in those ultra-modern displays, but the d-fashioned ones that taper from a healthy inch at the bottom a bare wick-width at the top. Good candles deserve to be roperly displayed and I recommend brass. Brass picks up the ickering light and blends it with the gilded reflection of the andle. And, when the candle is not lit, what better mantle ecoration than a brass candle-stick?

As you may have guessed, I have found a fine selection of rass candlesticks. My favorites are shaped like lotus flowers. he rows of gold-colored petals curl around to hide the spike that olds the candle. There are several stylizations of this flower. he prices begin at $8.95 a pair.

Oriental word-symbols make a pleasant ornament at any me. I saw a brass candlestick with the 'long life' symbol that truck me as being appropriate to its function. A pair cost $22.95. ther word-symbols are used as pot stands at 98 cents or wall laques at $5.50 each.

With an eye to the new year I bought a 1968 journal. These andy books come in a variety of formats to fit a variety of eeds. A spiral journal, the same size and shape as a tenographer's notebook, costs $1.60. The coil makes it easy to jot own new appointments or flip back to check on an old one. For ose who must plan ahead there are books that show a week at time. Covered in sturdy plastic, these appointment calendars ell for $2.30. Reminiscent of my childhood, are the pocket diaries hat my friends and I used to record the highpoints of our lives when we remembered. As handsome as they were then, these ttle books cost $1.90.

At Christmas we are inclined to forget the furred and athered members of the family. With this in mind, a local store as Christmas stockings for your pet. Designed for dogs, cats and udgerigars, these stockings contain a food treat, a toy or two nd a booklet on care and training. Each stocking sells for $1 and s sure to be a benefit both to you and your pet.

If you would like to know where I found these items, please all me at 382-3131.

This Furnished Living Room Sold for $3

The bazaar bargain of the year was a fully furnished living-room for $3, complete with the finest wall-to-wall carpet. The Quita Nichol Auxiliary to Goodwill Enterprises for the handicapped had several of these sets, just the right size for a doll, at their fall tea and bazaar, Thursday, in the Goodwill building.

A festive bottle cover in bright turquoise presided over a table filled with knitted tea cosies and golf club covers. The table next to it was piled with bright aprons, dresses, pot holders and towels.

For Christmas shoppers there was a table filled with Christmas stockings, tiny bookmarks, decorated soaps and a host of other items. Table centres, knapkin holders and ornaments made of painted pine cones were popular, as were the Christmas Day aprons made of layers of paper napkins that could be torn off to present a clean surface at any time.

Cakes, cookies and pies disappeared quickly at the home cooking stall, as did the fresh watercress and chrysanthemums at the produce table. The white elephant stall was so crowded that buyers had to wait their turn just to see the merchandise. There was also a door prize and several raffles.

While they were waiting an excellent tea was served to guests at tables that were rarely empty.

Mrs. J. Gibbs opened the event.

In charge of the bazaar were Mrs. J. S. MacKay, president and Mrs. E. F. W. Cox, general convener. Selling tickets at the door were Mrs. R. A. Caddell, treasurer, and Mrs. V. Angus. Miss Mary Adamson was in charge of publicity.

Working on the stalls were Mrs. E. T. Lee and Mrs. B. Westgate, home cooking; Mrs. A. J. Bird and Mrs. I. J. Kinsey, white elephant; Mrs. W. Green, Mrs. R. Oxtoby and Mrs. P. Pederson, new goods and aprons; Mrs. I. Fowler and Mrs. C. R. Fast, Christmas gifts.

Mrs. H. L. McKenzie was in charge of the Christmas hamper raffle, Mrs. P. Pederson, the Christmas cake raffle and Mrs. A. Holmes, the petit point picture raffle. Mrs. C. N. McMeakin was in charge of the gift dip.

Tea conveners were Mrs. J. Knight and Mrs. H. Todd. Tea hostess was Mrs. G. S. McMorran. Mrs. Fred Homer arranged table decorations and Mrs. F. Mallett was in charge of the tea urns. Also helping with the tea were Mrs. H. Stewart, Mrs. R. Empey, Mrs. J. Homer, Mrs. W. G. Walton, Mrs. E. Symons, Mrs. E. Bowden, Mrs. R. McDermatt, Mrs. R. F. Gray, and Mrs. W. George.

The proceeds of $600 will go toward finishing the kitchen in the new Goodwill building.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Steady Boyfriend Has No Manners

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Don't you think a girl's steady boy friend (almost her fiance) should be allowed to come to dinner at her house as often as he wants to? Mother has set a limit of three times a week.

I say Leo should be welcome here every night as we plan to marry as soon as one of us gets out of school and gets a job.

Daddy has gotten very hateful about it and calls Leo a freeloader behind his back. He says any boy who will accept a dinner invitation more than once a week without inviting the girl out, even for a hotdog, is a bum.

Leo isn't a bum. He just doesn't have the money to take me out so the only time I get to see him is when I invite him here for dinner. He used to drop by to study every evening and he'd stay on for dinner.

But never more than five nights a week.

How can I get my parents to make Leo welcome any time?

LEO'S STEADY

DEAR STEADY: Leo may be your "steady" . . . but he hardly qualifies as a "fiance," I think three times a week is plenty. And if you see Leo only when he's feeding his face at your table, maybe three times a week is too much.

DEAR ABBY: I am in the sixth grade and I hate my teacher. If Miss K catches a girl with her skirt rolled up at the top to make it shorter, she makes her unroll it, and tells her if she catches her with her skirt rolled up again she will call her mother.

Abby, a girl can come to school with a real, real, short mini-skirt, like eight inches above the knees, and Miss K doesn't say a thing, but the girls with their skirts rolled up get the dickens. I don't think this is fair, do you?

HATES MISS K

DEAR HATES: Girls who wear mini-skirts to school obviously do so with their mother's knowledge and approval. But if a girl's skirt is rolled up, she's probably showing more leg than her mother sent her to school showing.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "SECRET PEN PAL": With the holidays approaching soon, if you anticipate being hostess to another gang of rude relatives, either do it gracefully and silently, or see your travel-agent now.

Mini-Skirt Furs

NEW YORK (CP) — Fur styling changes less than most fashions, except for the cheaper furs.

Naturally, when you invest in an expensive fur coat, you want assurance you won't be out of style next year. Mink is usually handled in classic conservatism for this reason.

However, this year a number of furriers are venturing into the mini-skirted fur coat and costume, even in mink. Sufficient extremely short styles were seen here at various fashion showings to indicate that the furriers don't expect long skirts suddenly to descend below the knee.

Churchman Refutes Anti-Israel Charge

TORONTO (CP) — Gershon Avner, Israeli ambassador to Canada, says in a letter published in the United Church Observer that editor Rev. A. C. Forrest has turned the church publication into an adjunct of the Arab League—propaganda office in Ottawa.

Dr. Forrest replied in an interview that he had never used material from the Arab office.

The letter in the Nov. 15 issue says an anti-Israeli position is legitimate and there is no reason why Israel should not be criticized.

"But you will not expect Israel to take much notice of criticism produced in vicious terms, developed by devious methods and based on basic and extreme hostility," it said.

TOURED MIDDLE EAST

Dr. Forrest, who toured the Middle East after the June war, devoted the October issue of The Observer to affairs there.

Mr. Avner said Dr. Forrest had opposed Israel before it was established in 1948.

"Fortunately, from our point of view, I have reason to believe that Dr. Forrest is regarded as hopelessly biased on this issue, and there is, therefore, little danger that his call for strong action against Israel will be taken very seriously where it really matters," the letter said.

The letter said Dr. Forrest had accused Israel of refusing to do anything to solve the problems of Arab refugees. The refugees are paying for the mistakes of their leaders in refusing since 1948 to recognize the United Nations partition of Palestine, it said.

CLAIM FACTS HIDDEN

Mr. Avner said Dr. Forrest had "concealed" the fact that the Arab states started the June war after threatening Israel's destruction.

In an interview, Dr. Forrest said he has never been in the Arab League propaganda office in Ottawa.

He said the first article he ever wrote on Israel was in 1956 when his reports were criticized as unbalanced pro-Israel.

Dr. Forrest said his severe critical stand on the present Israel treatment of Arab refugees reflects the position of the World Council of Churches and the United Nations.

Striking view of St. Aidan's Church is taken through main window during wedding ceremony.

ST. AIDAN'S WILL MARK ITS 94th ANNIVERSARY

St. Aidan's United Church, Richmond at Cedar Hill Cross Road, will celebrate its 94th anniversary Sunday.

It began as an outreach of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church into the Saanich Peninsula in 1863, when Rev. James MacGregor, the St. Andrew's minister began Sunday services and a Sunday school in the Cedar Hill school house.

This witness continued for 21 years.

In 1894 the congregation achieved separate status when Rev. R. G. Murison was inducted as the first minister of Cedar Hill congregation which designated itself St. Aidan's Presbyterian Church.

FIRST BUILDING

In the same year, the first church building was erected and dedicated on Nov. 18. With a succession of devoted members, and officers and dedicated ministers. the congregation has continued to serve the community ever since.

In 1925 the congregation voted to enter union with the Congregational and Methodist Churches, and since that time has been known as St. Aidan's United Church.

The church building underwent a major renovation in 1934 during the ministry of Rev. H. J. Armitage, who now lives in retirement in Victoria. At that time, the Sir Richard McBride stained glass windows were installed: windows which many years before had come from England by sailing ship around Cape Horn.

The growth of population in the area made the sanctuary inadequate to meet the needs of a growing congregation. For some years, therefore, the congregation met in the church hall which provided greater seating accommodation.

650 FAMILIES

The rate of growth continued and, in 1960, during the ministry of Rev. A. I. Avery, the present church building, seating 500 and of attractive modern architecture, was erected and dedicated. The congregation now numbers some 650 families.

Rev. A. G. MacLeod, the present minister, will conduct anniversary services Sunday and special music will be provided by the choir under the direction of organist Vera Barclay. Carol Hayward will be soloist.

'Come Unto Me'

"Soul and Body" is the subject of Sunday's Lesson Sermon in all Christian Science churches.

"Incline your ear, and come unto me: hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David." This verse from Isaiah is included in the Responsive Reading.

NEWS OF CITY CHURCHES

'Can't Convict Million Dollars'

Many of our laws make more of property rights than people's rights, says Rev. Norman Archer, minister of Emmanuel Baptist Church.

"There is a great deal of truth in the old cry, you can't convict a million dollars. But in our credit-ridden, 20th Century society, ownership has become extremely complex.

"At one time, you had to struggle to keep up with the Joneses. Since credit came into its own, you no longer have to keep up with them—you just stand still and meet them on the way down."

Mr. Archer will speak on Property and Ownership at the 11 a.m. service in Emmanuel church.

Did Jesus repudiate the Old Testament?

This will be the question asked Sunday by Rev. H. R. Whitmore in both Garden City and Wilkinson Road United churches.

Church Schools Face Shutdown?

TORONTO (CP) — Students in church-operated schools face increased fees or a shutdown of their classes if the provincial government taxes church property, educationists here warn.

The Smith committee on taxation recommended that the government tax church property up to 35 per cent over 10 years.

"It would probably mean a considerable increase in fees," says Rev. Patrick Fogarty of the Ontario English Catholic Education Association. "Some schools would have to close."

"Two thousand dollars in taxes would kill us," says John Wright, principal of St. George's College which is on property belonging to St. Alban's Anglican Church.

NEW STRUCTURES NEEDED

'Our Actions Will Decide Our Survival'

The church is no longer central to society and culture, says Canon Hilary Butler, canon lecturer to the Anglican diocese of British Columbia.

"The form of society in which the church developed no longer exists and will never recur . . . in an age of rapid change the church is almost as much crippled as aided by its history."

Canon Butler said the institutional church acquired its existing shape in consequence of adjusting itself to successive different social and cultural situations.

"Much of its formation took place in an epoch when the church itself was central to the creative life of the culture in which it existed. All this has changed. The church is no longer central to society or culture."

'POSSIBLE TO REFORM'

Canon Butler was speaking at a meeting of clergy and lay representatives of Greater Victoria Council of Churches in the Queenswood House of Studies, 2494 Arbutus.

"Up to a point," he said, "it is possible to reform and revitalize the existing internal structures of the religious institutions . . .

"But these internal structures are no longer adequate to the mission to which the Holy Spirit is calling Christ's followers today. New structures must be formed, perhaps within, but certainly outside the organized institutions.

WORKING GROUPS

As working groups of the World Council of Churches have suggested, some of these new structures may themselves become continuing institutions; others may be formed to cope with specific needs or crises in human affairs.

"But we must expect that they will not normally consist of members of any one denomination, or even solely of Christians. Their function will be, whether explicitly or not, to incarnate the presence of Christ in the areas where they operate.

"They will enact the gospel, not merely preach the gospel. And for the foreseeable future, the credibility of the gospel is going to depend more and more upon what we do as Christians outside the organized church."

NO LONGER ADEQUATE

Canon Butler said the old institutional forms which served the proclamation of the gospel in the past are no longer adequate for the task.

"They are no longer adequate even to protect themselves against loss of membership and hopelessly dwindling recruitment to the church ministry."

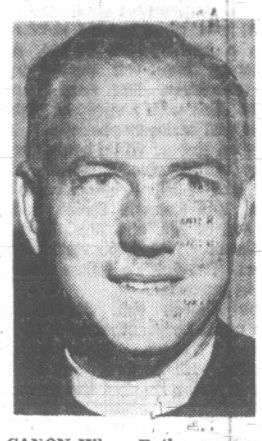
Many people today contend that true Christianity springs, not from consent to theoretical doctrines or compliance with canon law, but from authentic personal commitment to the spirit of Christ.

"The only sure proof of the presence of the spirit of Christ that people will recognize today is based on the evidence of the senses. If a person or an institution is spending plenty of honest energy in service to others, that is evidence of the spirit of Christ being present."

WHAT THEY DO!

Canon Butler said life and work matter more than theology and ecclesiology, and what Christ and his followers do is more important than any intellectual explanation of it.

"People today are searching for the meaning of their life. If their circumstances and education have conditioned them to apprehend meaning more in actions and events than in concepts and philosophies, then I maintain we Christians must adjust ourselves to this contemporary and get on and preach the gospel in terms of it."



CANON Hilary Butler was appointed canon lecturer to the Anglican diocese of British Columbia in 1961. The appointment was made under the will of the late Lt.-Col. John Albert Hall as part of a program to reconcile science and religion in the minds of Christians — particularly university students.

Canon Butler said he believes new structures outside the church are coming into being because the Holy Spirit is moving Christian individuals and groups to meet the human need.

"I believe the faith and order boffins will have to start studying the theological status of these new instruments of mission and their relationship to the institutional church."

Canon Butler said he did not believe the day of the organized church is over.

SOCIETY CHANGING

"They have an indispensable function to perform. But their investment in the world as it is, and as it was, and the inertia of their traditions make them as they stand unmanoeuvreable in a society that is changing from top to bottom with increasing rapidity.

"They are not adequate to perform the whole mission of Christ. They need auxiliaries—frigates, if you like—whose higher speeds and greater manoeuvreability can protect and enhance the usefulness of the slower-moving vessel.

"We have a church, we have a Lord who is greater than the church and who is constantly calling us to adjust to new situations for His sake."

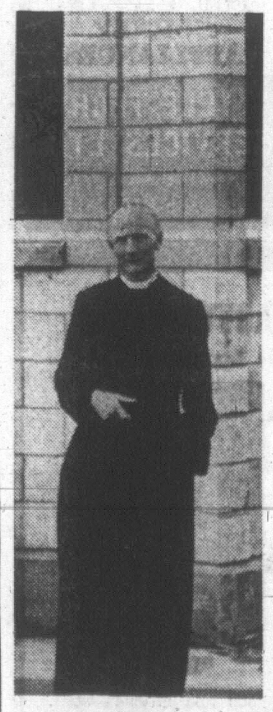
Canon Butler commended a proposal to appoint a full-time executive director of the Greater Victoria Council of Churches.

"Here, it seems to me, is a new type of Christian structure capable of harnessing the resources of the traditional churches, but free to venture into all sorts of new fields of Christian service with the concerted intelligence and goodwill of the whole Christian community behind it."

'Curb Hutterites'

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties Wednesday asked the provincial government to stop issuing permits to Hutterites to establish new colonies until "a competent commission" is established to examine the effects of Hutterite colonies on surrounding communities.

Year 15 Marked



ANNIVERSARY service will be conducted in St. Barnabas Anglican Church Sunday at 11 a.m. by the Rector, Canon Brian T. Page, seen outside the new vestry now under construction.

Fifteen years ago Thursday, the Anglican church of St. Barnabas at Belmont and Begbie was consecrated by Archbishop Harold Sexton of British Columbia.

The then new building, similar in design to that of St. George-the-Martyr, Cadboro Bay, was built at a cost of $40,000. It was begun in September 1951, dedicated on April 20, 1952, and consecrated on Nov. 16 the same year.

But the history of the parish goes back to March 1890 when the first church of St. Barnabas was opened at the corner of Cook Street and Caledonia.

Plans for the church were drawn by the rector, Rev. G. W. Taylor, and modelled on his former church in Ottawa. The completed structure was consecrated by the Lord Bishop of Columbia.

When the new St. Barnabas was opened in 1953, the old church was sold to the Ukrainian Greek Catholics of Victoria, who still worship there.

Banquet Planned

Annual banquet of the Christian Businessmen's Association will be held in Centennial United Church Hall next Saturday at 6:30 p.m. Guest speaker will be Claude Gelinas of Minneapolis.

SOUL-SEARCHING SESSION

Vanier Institute Takes Long Look at Purposes

By SUSAN BECKER

OTTAWA (CP) — Members of the Vanier Institute of the Family spent Friday afternoon in a soul-searching session while its patron, Madame Pauline Vanier, watched quietly.

After listening to hours of formal speeches at the organization's third annual meeting which began here Thursday, some members were asking what the institute was really all about, what it was doing and should do.

The institute was incorporated under the patronage of Governor-General and Madame Georges P. Vanier in 1965 for the purpose of strengthening family life. It was to gather information on which to base educational programs designed to help families cope with modern life.

Rt. Rev. E. S. Reed, Anglican Bishop of Ottawa, touched on a key point when he asked the membership to consider whether it should publicly state its position on topics such as family planning and abortion.

Rev. John Shea of Ottawa, director of the Canadian Catholic Conference, asked if the Vanier Institute was able and willing to present its ideas on the divorce issue coming before Parliament.

Strong opposition came from Edgar Guay of Quebec who said it was not part of the organization's job to take sides.

Several institute members stressed the need for youth in the organization.

Change is "fearsome to us" but adventurous to the young, Mrs. Wilma Hansen of Calgary said, suggesting responsible high school students might be brought into the institute.

Donald Harris of London, Ont., suggested institute-sponsored seminars for young people, perhaps at provincial campuses. A Vanier school on family life might be established to extend the organization's influence.

The discussion followed a speech by Stewart Sutton, institute secretary-general, in which he said the organization could not "get down to devoting all its energies to its basic work" until it rested on a sound financial base.

The institute should not merely be concerned with "isolated segments" of the family's function. It had to develop close collaboration with numerous professions, levels of government and organizations.

Dr. Frederick Elkin, chairman of York University's sociology department, said the institute's first large-scale research project is in its initial stage.

Dr. Elkin, the project director, said the family life education project will survey existing programs in Canada, Study public attitudes and behavior, and examine many special problems in the field.

Associations, school boards, daily and weekly newspapers, radio and television stations would receive questionnaires next spring about their involvement in the field.

YOUNG REBELS ACCEPT CREED, SCORN CHURCHES

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

A lot of young people are groping their way toward "churchless Christianity".

They are attracted to Christianity as a style of life, but are repelled by the church as an institution.

Their hostility toward the church is, in part, a reflection of an anti-institutional bias which is one of the outstanding characteristics of this generation. It also can be seen in their tendency to value higher education while scorning the university in which they receive it.

But today's young people make a specific indictment of the church which goes beyond distrust of institutions in general. They feel that the church has become so identified with middle-class white society that it can no longer act as a reforming leaven within it.

Instead of transforming the social milieu in which it finds itself, they say, the church has conformed to it, and in the process has learned to tolerate evils such as war, racial discrimination and economic inequality which are flagrantly contrary to the teaching of Christ.

Also, they charge, the church has done the most un-Christlike thing imaginable: it has become self-centred. It is often so intent on advancing its own institutional programs and interests that it has little money or energy to expend on serving human beings in need.

These young Christian rebels are not much interested in broad movements to reform the church, either because they're too impatient for such slow work or because they see little hope of success.

But most of them recognize that Christianity is preeminently a religion of life-in-community. Fellowship and cooperation with other human beings is an essential part of Christian living. Therefore, some kind of group structure is needed, even for "churchless" Christianity.

Public Discussion Irks L.A. Cardinal

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The public discussion of changes sought by Los Angeles nuns is unfortunate, James Francis Cardinal McIntyre says in his first statement on the controversy.

The discourse over experimental changes in dress and education should be left to the Sacred Congregation for Religious at the Vatican, the cardinal said Friday night in a statement.

"It is unfortunate that this subject has become a topic of public discussion since it concerns a matter which intimately affects the private spiritual life of so many devoted religious women," he added.

But, Cardinal McIntyre said, "the final decision of future steps to be taken by the Immaculate Heart Sisters resides with the sisters themselves."

The sisters seek modernized habits, the choice to use either given or religious names and permission to pursue special talents that may differ from traditional teaching or nursing concepts of the order.

In addition, they want permission for 43 of the 200 sisters now teaching in the Los Angeles archdiocese to return to college next fall to obtain teaching credentials.

When the proposals were presented to Cardinal McIntyre last month, the traditionalist Roman Catholic leader asked the nuns to reconsider their decision.

34 Faiths Find They Can Work Hand in Hand

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Interfaith Conference, financed by a $99,500 centennial grant, is described by Executive Director Eve Gilstorf as an "unqualified success," as it winds up 28 months of work.

"We have opened a door which has shed light and brought 34 religious faiths together in fostering and promoting religious activities across the country," she says in a final report to the board of directors.

It will be delivered at a meeting in Winnipeg next Thursday.

The conference was established in July, 1965, at a meeting called by the federal centennial commission.

Through it a number of interfaith services were organized for everything from the voyageur canoe pageant to Queen Elizabeth's Dominion Day appearance on Parliament Hill.

LIST REVENUE, COSTS

Revenue of $110,767.03 includes the $99,500 centennial commission grant, $6,265 from the sale of publications like the Anthology of Prayer, and $3,430 in royalties from the Centennial Athem and Centennial Hymn.

The anthology cost $16,611 to produce, the hymn $1,616, and the anthem $1,588.

A French-language version of the hymn and anthem "were not popular, since very few requests of this nature came from Quebec," the report says.

The conference mailed out 18,000 kits last December to ministers, priests, rabbis and lay preachers. Copies of the anthology, hymn, anthem and other material were included.

A number were sold independently and Mrs. Gilstorf said orders are still coming in from as far away as Haiti.

A number of interfaith services are expected Sunday, Dec. 31, to see out the centennial.

Sex and Society

Sex and society will be the topic of Mrs. Lee Minto at the 9:30 and 11 a.m. services Sunday at the Unitarian Church of Victoria, 106 Superior Street.

Mrs. Minto is executive director of the Planned Parenthood Centre of Seattle. She is a member of the National Advisory Committee on Sex Education for the United States.

Currently secretary of the Sex Education Association of King County, Washington, she lectures frequently in the northwest on population problems, birth cotrol and sex education.

'Here Comes the Bride' Startles Congregation

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The congregation at Knox United Church was given a surprise one recent Sunday morning when the church organist broke into a few bars of Here Comes the Bride.

At first, they thought there had been a mistake. But down the aisle came pretty Margaret Floyd, 20, to exchange vows with 23-year-old Richard Arnett.

Rev. B. H. Taylor said he had had the idea in mind for a long time. And when the right couple approached him, he suggested a ceremony performed as part of the worship service. Why?

"We have so many marriages in this church, mostly of people not connected with the church. Sometimes we feel we're simply carrying out a ritual which is quite unrelated to the total worship of the Christian church."

Mr. Taylor said he hoped other ministers would perform Sunday marriages, although they should not become a common practice.

He suggested they should serve as a symbol of the fact that marriage belongs in Christian worship.

When the brief Floyd-Arnett ceremony ended, the couple took part in the remainder of the worship service, which included two congregational hymns and a sermon on Chirstian marriage.

In the United Church, marriage is not officially considered a sacrament, as in the Roman Catholic Church, but Mr. Taylor said it is "of sacramental nature."

The bride said she liked the idea because it brought "all our friends together."

"It's the kind of wedding that seems to have a little more meaning to it than most," she added.

Christian Sect Luring Students From Schools?

TOKYO (Reuters) — Japanese parents claim a new Christian sect is luring their sons and daughters away from their homes and studies.

The sect is the World Christian United Divine Spirit Church, which arrived in Japan from Korea eight years ago and now has an estimated 40,000 members here.

Mothers and fathers at a recent Tokyo meeting said their sons and daughters gave up their university and high school classes and left home to live together in communal dormitories built by the church.

They add that, for 40 days each year, converts were required to go on missionary tours during which they must live on what they can beg or obtain by collecting and selling junk. The parents alleged that the young persons returned home undernourished and starving.

The meeting was told that about 3,000 young Japanese have joined the church, including 1,500 university students and 500 high school pupils.

A spokesman for the church said it was founded by Mun Seon Myung 13 years ago after the end of the Korean War. It claims to have about 500,000 members in South Korea and converts in other countries.

3 Attend Women's Conference

Three Victoria representatives attended the third regional conference of United Church Women of Canada at the Banff School of Fine Arts.

They were Mrs. Duncan Smith, St. Aidan's; Mrs. T. G. Cheston, Esquimalt United, and Mrs. R. A. Sharrocks, Metropolitan United.

At the Banff conference, Saskatchewan United Church Women were hosts to members from Manitoba, Alberta and British Columbia numbering 550.

Nine representatives of the Anglican Church Women attended as observers.

Under the leadership of 26 United Church Women, discussion groups were held daily throughout the conference.

Mrs. Cynthia Wedel of New York, associate general secretary for Christian Unity, National Council of Churches, was theme speaker.

"The history of Christianity," she said, "is a history of man trying to tie God down; trying to make Him into man's own image.

"But it never works. That is why we have the crises we are having now. Christians tend to assume that everything related to the church is important and should be taught.

"Our trouble is we make the institution, which contains the power of God, an end in itself."

Is 150 Per Cent Less Than 11%?

By JOHN MIKA

Fools may rush in where angels fear to tread but they'll have to line up first behind politicians carried away with partisan fervor.

Attorney-general Robert Bonner gave a good example of that this week when he slammed federal finance minister Mitchell Sharp's tax increase proposals.

Mika

That's no solution to inflation, Mr. Bonner says, and then proceeds to point to one way of actually reducing expenditures.

All that free-spending Ottawa has to do is cut down the civil service ranks — not by firings but by refusing to replace those leaving during the coming year which, in itself, would realize an approximately 15 per cent cost saving.

●

As of last year, there were 145,783 persons employed under the federal civil service act compared with 131,646 in 1952.

That's a healthy 11 per cent increase.

But during the same period, Mr. Bonner's own government ran up a 150 per cent increase in the provincial civil service.

The annual reports of the B.C. civil service commission show it was responsible for 8,543 employees in 1952 and 23,373 in 1966.

A perusal of the provincial commission's reports shows the repetitious complaint that personnel officers are overworked trying to fill the insatiable demand of the provincial government for employees.

For example, it informed the legislature that "work in recruiting and selection increased at a rapid and increasing pace" in 1963.

●

And things certainly weren't any better last year when the commission reported "the accelerated pace in the government's personnel administration as mentioned in the annual report of 1965 was even greater throughout 1966."

Yes but, I can hear some government members argue, look at all the non-civil service employees paid by Ottawa.

And it's true that there are many.

When you total up all the federal civil servants, other salaried employees and workers in the various crown corporations, you come up with a staggering 371,976 in 1966.

But the province also has a non-civil service payroll which swells its total to an astonishing 36,345.

The additions include 1,674 persons who worked for the liquor control board last year, 1,538 in the ferry authority, about 1,700 in the RCMP provincial police force (although Ottawa pays part of their cost), 1,810 in the Pacific Great Eastern Railway and 6,250 in B.C. Hydro.

The oddest thing about this suggestion for cutbacks in government employees is that it should come from Mr. Bonner.

Because in 1952 there were 493 employees in the attorney-general's department when he took over. Last year its strength was listed by the civil service commission as 2,147 — up more than 400 per cent.

But that's not all.

Mr. Bonner succeeded to the Commerical Transport portfolio in 1964 when that department had 13 employees. By 1966 it had grown to 106—an increase of more than 90 per cent in two years.

●

And finally, the most ironic fact.

Mr. Bonner was minister of industrial development, trade and commerce between the years 1957 and 1964.

When he took over the department, there were 71 employees in it. When he left, there were 83.

That's a relatively modest increase of 17 per cent.

However, in the two years following, the department has seen its responsibilities increased tremendously for data processing on behalf of all government departments and it churns out a greatly increased number of industrial and trade research reports.

Yet incumbent minister Ralph Loffmark has found the heavier load can be carried by fewer employees. By 1966, there were only 75 in the department — better than a 10 per cent cut in the two years Mr. Bonner had gone!

●

Anyone who knows the attorney-general would not accuse him of hiring useless persons. He's made a good case for increasing the police, probation workers, securities investigators and all the concommittant clerks and stenos.

It's just that if he thinks he has made a good case against Ottawa's black kettle, what's he going to do about his own pot?

Speaking of federal appointments, inevitably there are some that raise a few eyebrows.

Northern Affairs Minister Arthur Laing once was B.C. Liberal leader and developed an attachment to one-time Liberal MLA and millionaire Gordon Gibson.

It seemed fair enough to me when Mr. Laing appointed Mr. Gibson's son, Gordon Jr., as his administrative assistant in Ottawa.

But this week Mr. Laing also appointed Gordon Sr. to fill a vacant seat on the Northwest Territorial Council and this father-son gesture to old personal loyalties seems a little hard to swallow.

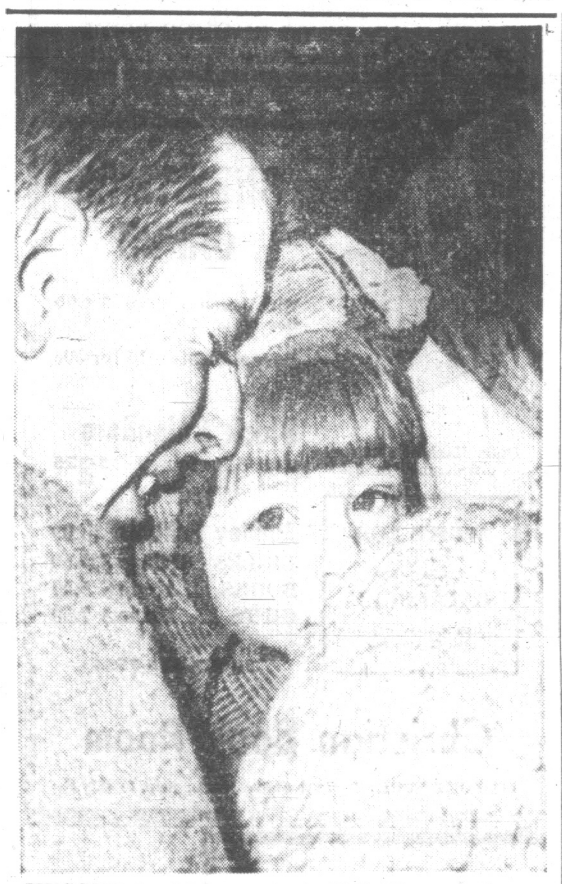
It's been a bad week all round for B.C. Liberals in Ottawa. The Young Liberal Voice, published by the party's youth section in this province, handed out these brickbats.

●

To Labor Minister John Nicholson: "It is time for the minister responsible for housing to spell out to the country and to the provinces the exact size and nature of the housing crisis instead of (a) trying to ignore it, (b) claiming that Liberals are doing better than the Tories did."

To Victoria MP David Groos (for taunting Quebecers by introducing a bill to have Queen Elizabeth's portrait on both the front and back of all Canadian money):

"At a time when the country is in serious danger of disintegrating, this action of David Groos does serious harm to the credibility of the Liberal Party as a national force."



HUGGED by his parents is Tod Plancon, 2, on being handed back in Fairfield, Conn., Friday. Tod was in family car Thursday when it was stolen. The car was located abandoned but youngster was not found until Friday morning sitting on porch of elderly couple's home about half a mile from his own house. (AP Wirephoto)

Murder Conviction Recalled by Judge

WINNIPEG (CP) — A judge made reference to a past murder conviction against Charles Heathman Friday in sentencing him to 15 years in prison for abducting and indecently assaulting a five-year-old girl.

The 44 - year - old Heathman, convicted Oct. 24 by an assize court jury, was sentenced by Mr. Justice F. M. Bastin who told him:

"I believe that I should disclose that your name was familiar to me before your trial opened.

"It had come to my notice that you had been convicted at New Westminister of the murder of a little boy and that the British Columbia Court of Appeal had quashed your conviction."

The judge said he was disregarding completely the B.C. case in coming to a decision regarding sentence on the abduction and assault charges.

He added: "I cannot disregard the fact that for 25 years you have lived a consistently criminal life and have repeatedly been convicted for offences against property and one occasion for the possession of narcotics.

"This shows clearly that you lack the facility to conduct yourself with decency and honesty in the business of life."

Heathman was convicted of the Labor Day, 1960, sex slaying of 10-year-old newsboy Donald Ottley, in the Okanagan community of Vernon. His conviction was quashed by the B.C. Court of Appeal.

After his acquittal, he sold a confession to the Vancouver Sun for $500, in which he admitted killing the boy.

Later, however, he denied the confession, saying he was "drunk and broke" when he sold it.

$6,000 Grant To Continue Bibliography

The Canada Council has announced a $6,000 grant to Dr. R. H. Roy, associate professor of history at the University of Victoria, to continue work on a unique three-volume bibliography of B.C.

It is the second grant towards the project and comes with the first volume, compiled by Barbara Lowther, now on the press.

When the work is completed, within four years, it will list every item of printed material on British Columbia.

"It will provide a working tool for social scientists which has been needed for decades," says Dr. Roy.

Each of the three volumes will run about 360 pages and will cover a certain period in the province's history. The work just finished covers from 1849 to 1899.

Dr. Roy is not yet certain whether the next volume will be the one reaching from the early days of exploration in the mid-eighteenth century to 1849 or the work covering from the turn of this century to the present day.

Each is expected to take about two years to complete.

The history professor's grant is among $345,952 in grants announced by the Canada Council for advanced research in the humanities and social sciences.

Full Agenda Set For Oak Bay Ratepayers' Meet

Offensive words in school texts, overnight parking on Oak Bay streets and the question of official support for municipal candidates are on the agenda Wednesday for a general meeting of Oak Bay Ratepayers' Association.

A special meeting Tuesday, Dec. 5, at 8 p.m. in the municipal hall will give Oak Bay ratepayers a chance to hear candidates for municipal and school board offices and to fire questions at them.

The meeting is jointly sponsored by the ratepayers' association, the Oak Bay Board of Trade and the Association of Women Electors.

Reparations Sought By Congo

KINSHASA (Reuters) — European countries whose nationals were among white mercenaries who fought The Congo government forces for three months will be asked to pay reparations, a 10-nation African committee decided today.

An official announcement said the decision was made at a final meeting of an Organization of African Unity committee on mercenaries.

A total of 129 mercenaries, joined by about 1,000 former Katangan gendarmes in a rebellion that started in July, now are held in a camp in neighboring Rwanda. When they crossed into Rwanda Nov. 5 the mercenaries said they ran out of ammunition while holding the nearby eastern Congo city of Bukavu against the Congolese army.

The mercenaries come from Belgium, France, Italy, Britain, Portugal, Rhodesia, Israel, Greece, Spain, West Germany, Luxembourg and South Africa.

City Hall Morale Shaken by Blast

By JIM HUME
City Hall Reporter

We are left wondering, after the fuss and feathers of the past week, if Ald. Robert Baird realized what he would be doing to city hall morale when he slashed out at city manager Dennis Young.

Hume

It is doubtful, for Ald. Baird in the past has tended to confuse the sensational statement with sound reasoning.

Typical was his earlier "whip the hippies" cause which, while winning considerable popular support, doesn't stand up too well as a solution to a social problem.

But I am straying from the subject in hand: the morale of the workers, high and low, in city hall, morale, sadly shaken by Ald. Baird's public outburst.

A few facts which might be of interest to the reader:

The in-camera meeting held last Monday in the mayor's office was not a secret meeting. Mayor Hugh Stephen, four days before, alerted the press that the meeting would be held and informed the two reporters staffing city hall of the topic under discussion.

●

I am sure that had we requested permission to attend for background information purposes the mayor would have welcomed us. He has already set a well-established precedent regarding in-camera meetings— of which we have attended some half-dozen this year — to which the press is invited to prepare reporters for a news story which could be some months off.

The last one involved a master plan for some vital changes soon to be made in a specific area of the city.

Why no story? It's quite simple, really. The session was of a preliminary nature only. The plans revealed were in the kicking-around stage and will undoubtedly be changed many times as the weeks go by. And considerable land acquisition will be involved.

I don't think we need to explain why it would be costly to the taxpayer if city hall announced where and when it intended to purchase a plot or several plots of land.

The Monday meeting was different in topic but the same in principle.

Of the most preliminary nature it was called to discuss proposed salary increases for department heads and to permit the aldermen to speak freely on the subject — to get very personal if they wished—without the public watching.

Public whippings, verbal or physical, went out some time ago.

Ald. Baird says all meetings discussing salaries should be open to the public. I wonder why? So that we can all know that this employee or that isn't doing a good job and will not get a raise in pay this year?

Come now, Ald. Baird. Even in the rough and tumble of the Times newsroom the editor calls us in and closes the door before asking us to remove our shirts to receive the whip. If we do not respond with better effort we get fired.

And so it should be.

The public bawling out, even when some kind of rebuke is justified, does nothing for the morale of the person taking the tongue-lashing and unable to defend himself, nothing for the morale of other employees forced to witness the proceedings, and, in this case, nothing for the image of the alderman involved.

One other item on the city hall-election front.

It has been noticed that one of the candidates for an aldermanic seat is running on "the right of the people to know" ticket.

Just for the record and to save William Thomas undue embarrassment, the press attends all committee meetings at city hall, is welcomed to in-camera meetings, is willingly provided with information from department heads, and is even provided with minutes of meetings (may all editors forgive us) missed by neglect or other duties.

●

Mayor Stephen insists that city hall not only be run above suspicion but without the suggestion of nefarious deeds behind closed doors.

We have stated before, and now repeat, that other municipalities could benefit from Victoria's example. It is unfortunate that one candidate is already confusing the good guys with the bad guys.

The election grapevine, which should warm up considerably over the next few weeks, chattered out a couple of items over the past few days.

●

Michael J. Griffin —"Mike" to all and sundry — will not be running for council this year.

Mr. Griffin made his decision after Clyde Savage announced his intention to seek re-election.

Good friends for many years, Michael J. decided he could better serve by lending whatever support he can to Mr. Savage's campaign, a relatively small gesture but one which will make Mr. Savage a formidable contender.

The final item.

Mayor Stephen is the only man to date seeking the mayor's chair. Indications are that the situation will remain that way. But, just in case, the mayor is fully geared for a last-minute battle.

The campaign committee which led him to a triumph over two other candidates a year ago is assembled, organized, in good trim and standing in the wings should its services be required.

New RCAF Jet Costs Soaring

OTTAWA (CP) — Production of the new CF-5 jet fighter-bomber now is five months behind schedule.

Latest issue of the Sentinel, monthly magazine published by the information division at Canadian Forces Headquarters, says the first CF-5 will come off the assembly line at Canadair Ltd., Montreal in January, 1968.

Original production schedule called for the first plane to be completed in August, 1967.

The Sentinel also says the first training course on the CF-5 at Cold Lake, Alta., will start in January, 1969. Originally the first CF-5 squadron of 18 planes was to have been formed by that date.

Former Defence Minister Paul Hellyer, now transport minister, originally gave the total price of the CF-5 program —115 planes—as $215,000,000.

COSTS SOAR

However, the defence department has since disclosed some additional costs:

—$23,000,000 for the armament control system;

—$8,000,000 for the ground control system; and —about $50,000,000 for four jet tanker planes to refuel the CF-5 in flight.

This brings the total cost to about $296,000,000.

Informants said the government's current austerity program may result in production of fewer than 115 planes for the RCAF.

The CF-5 is an improved Canadian version of the American Northrop F-5. The Canadian type will have more powerful engines, a new nose to carry photo equipment, an improved navigation system and a new nose gear to shorten the takeoff run.

Early next year, about a dozen RCAF pilots will go to Williams Air Force Base in Arizona for two months of training on the American F-5. They will become the first instructors on the CF-5 at Cold Lake, the RCAF's big training base northeast of Edmonton.

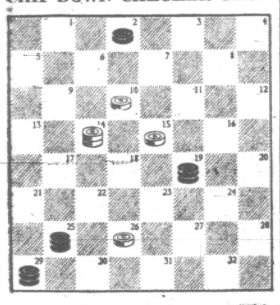
CHIP-DOWN CHECKER TEST



Test: White checkers, moving up the board, to move first and win in four moves. Can you meet this challenge?

Solution: White 26—23, Black 19—26, White 14—23—30—21, Black 29—25, White 21—30.

WHO'SIT?

He was born in 1878. In 1906, he recorded the fastest mile traveled on land on a motorcycle of his own invention. In 1910, he won a $10,000 prize for an airplane flight from Albany to New York City in a plane he designed and built. His is one of the great names of aviation pioneering. He died in 1930. He was——.

Answer: Glenn Curtiss.

CITY LAD'S IN HOT WATER

Joe, a city lad, spent a summer vacation working on a farm. One day the farmer found Joe beside a fence row in the blazing sun, slowly pouring water from a pail, over a corked stone jug.

Joe explained that the water was too warm for him to drink, so he was trying to cool it.

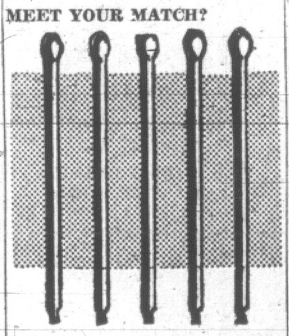
"And is that water in the pail cold, then? If so, why don't you drink that instead of wasting your time?" asked the farmer.

"Oh, no! It's just as warm as the water in the jug," replied the boy. "They are both too warm to drink; in fact, this pail of water is even warmer, because I took it from the horse-trough!"

The farmer angrily ordered him to stop wasting his time on such nonsense. Was he justified?

Answer: Joe was correct. By pouring the pail of water over the jug in not sufficient, he used the principle of "perspiration" to cool the water in the jug. The same principle causes "sweating" to cool the contents of water jugs used in various tropical countries.

MEET YOUR MATCH?



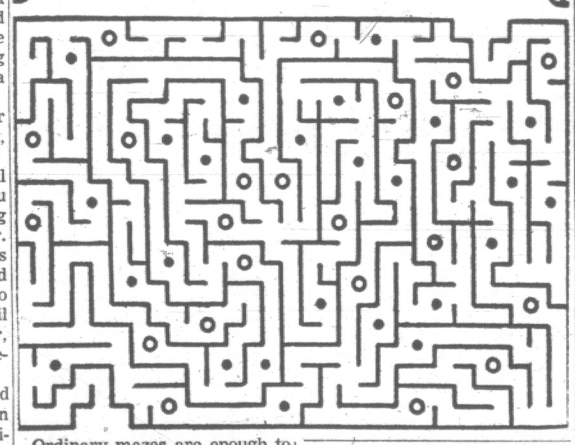
Challenge: Use five wooden matches such as above to form a five-pointed star. It's easy, but then there's a gimmick which may take some time to discover. What's that?

Solution: Bend each match in two without breaking it to form a point of the star.

What is today if the day after tomorrow is two days overdue?

Answer: Pay day!

SMART GALLERY



Ordinary mazes are enough to drive one dotty, but this one's worse. You'll see why when you study the diagram above. In it, you are to select an entrance at either bottom left or top right and trace a course to the opposite exit adhering to these rules: You must touch a black dot; then a white dot, or vice-versa, throughout your course. You cannot turn back or cross your path at any point.

IT'S ON THE HOUSE

The square of the number of Jones' house equals the difference of the squares of the numbers of his next door neighbors' houses on either side. The same thing applies to Smith's house on another street in which the house-numbering scheme is different, although Jones' number is not the same as Smith's.

What are their numbers?

Answer: Jones: 8 (even numbers all one side); Smith: 4 (odd and even consecutively).

First U.S. President born in the U.S.A. was: Thomas Jefferson, Martin Van Buren, Theodore Roosevelt. Which?

Answer: Martin Van Buren, born in 1782 at Kinderhook, N.Y.

ROCK PILE IS UP IN THE AIR

A massive spire of rock juts into the sky in eastern Wyoming. Indians called it Mato Tipi, meaning Bear's House, because they believed a huge bear once chased some Indian girls to its summit, clawed at its side, and imparted its present scraped appearance. It is higher than an 86-story building; has sides so shear that only professional mountain climbers are permitted to climb it. What is it called today?

Answer: It is now known as Devil's Tower.

TWISTED MIND?

Double this number, turn the answer upside down, and divide by three, the answer will be 327. What number?

No fair peeking at answer below.

Answer: The number is 53.

Police lesson: "Logical deduction is most important in the training of police officers," stated criminologist, Professor Murray. "Sometimes the question seems foolish, yet the answer may be obvious or simply deduced.

"Frequently the solution is not concealed, but is overlooked through inattention to details, or through misdirection. A favorite puzzle is the following, in which the narrator states the problem for his listeners:

" 'I am the pilot of a yellow passenger plane flying at an altitude of 10,000 feet; the pilot is wearing a blue jacket, brown shoes, white shirt and red socks. The upholstery is purple, and the stewardess is named Violet. The Passengers are named Alice Brown, Louis White, Joseph Green, Bob Blue, Jane Orange.'

"Notice the misdirection by use of the colors. One could go on giving details infinitum, but the conclusion is always the question: 'What is the name of the pilot?' " Can you answer?

Answer: The pilot's name is given in the very first word of the story.

Ukraine 'Enslavement' Hit

NEW YORK (CP) — Some 10,000 persons of Ukrainian descent, attending a four-hour rally in Madison Square Garden today, heard speakers condemn the Soviet Union for keeping "enslaved" the Ukraine and other once-free areas.

Michael Starr, a leading figure in Canada's opposition Conservative party, said no tyranny is more blind "than that exercised by the men of Moscow."

Gunfire Rips Jordan Truce

AMMAN, Jordan (UPI) — Israel and Jordanian troops exchanged machinegun fire across the Jordan River today, a government spokesman said.

Jordan blamed Israeli troops for starting the brief skirmish about five miles north of the Damia bridge. The shooting was the second exchange of fire between Jordan and Israel soldiers in four days.

Shots Halt for Mercy Plane

LAGOS (Reuters) — The Nigerian government agreed today to extend a ceasefire in the Port Harcourt area of secessionist Biafra to let a Red Cross plane complete a mercy mission, an International Red Cross representative announced here. The Port Harcourt airport has been under constant bombing attack by the federal Nigerian air force for the last six weeks.

Man Held in Bomb Try

CHICAGO (UPI) — Federal authorities today held a bottling company executive, Earl Cook, 37, on $100,000 bond for allegedly trying to kill his wife by planting a bomb last Sunday on a Chicago-to-San Diego jetliner. The bomb exploded, but none of the 74 passengers or six crew members was hurt. The American Airlines 727 was rocked and damaged by an explosion in its baggage compartment as it soared at 34,500 feet over Kansas.

Russians Admit Having Missile

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union has developed orbital nuclear missiles with devices enabling them to break through an enemy's missile defences, a Soviet military commander claimed today.

Marshal Nikolai I. Krylov, commander-in-chief of Soviet strategic rocket forces, made the announcement here at a meeting called in connection with Sunday's observance of Soviet Missile Forces Day.

He said the new missile is part of a formidable stockpile designed to protect the Soviet Union and "the entire world of socialism."

U.S. Defence Secretary Robert S. MacNamara announced Nov. 3 the United States had evidence the Soviet Union was testing an orbital bomb that could be put into use in a year's time.

Asked about Krylov's claim, the defence department in Washington said it has nothing further to add to what McNamara said Nov. 3.

LIKE SPACECRAFT

An orbital weapon is launched like the various spacecraft sent up by the United States and Russia. It can be brought down on a pre-selected target.

The Soviet Union had acknowledged before that it had orbital missiles, but this was the most explicit claim to date of their capabilities.

The penetration devices were especially significant in view of U.S. plans to build a "thin" anti-missile system that presumably would be vulnerable to missiles equipped with such devices.

The Soviet Union has developed "new, powerful missiles capable of delivering nuclear warheads to the target along ballistic and orbital trajectories," Krylov said.

"The head portions of these rockets carry devices to break through the enemy's anti-missile defences."

MOBILITY IMPORTANT

Then speaking of other rockets, Krylov said Soviet rocket forces also have solid-fuel intercontinental missiles that can be mounted on self-propelled carriers with cross-country mobility that makes them invulnerable.

"No other country has such launching facilities at its disposal," he declared.

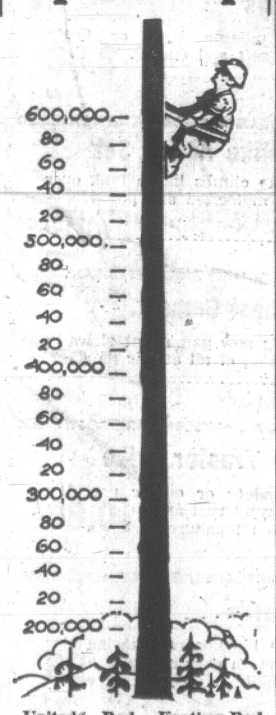
Krylov said Soviet rocketry is in "reliable hands."

"The Soviet rocket forces are on permanent combat duty," he added, "and are genuinely contributing in peacetime to the defence of the Soviet state and the entire world system of socialism."

Krylov's statement was distributed by Tass, the official news agency.

United Appeal

Put Him Up On Top



United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal has given the public less than a week to rally round the spar tree. Today's audited total stands at $551,830 or 91.9 per cent of the $600,000 target. A booth has now been set up at Douglas and Yates where donations may be handed in until Friday.

Quebec Eyes CBC Control

ST. JOHNS, Que. (CP) — Premier Daniel Johnson said today his Union Nationale government wants to gain control over the direction of the French-language section of the CBC.

Russia Clips UN Debate On Mideast

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Weary members of the United Nations Security Council embarked today on a weekend of negotiations over three rival resolutions aimed at breaking the Middle East stalemate.

The 15-nation council had hoped to reach a showdown vote Friday but adjourned after nine minutes. Bulgaria, at the obvious behest of the Soviet Union, asked for the adjournment until Monday, saying it awaited instructions from home.

One informed source said the Russians had sought a private agreement for the adjournment, but U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg retorted: "If you want a delay, you'll have to stand up and ask for it." Incensed, the Russians handed the assignment to Bulgaria, the other Communist member of the council.

Britain's Lord Caradon told reporters later that Council President Manadou Kante of Mali had promised to keep the group in session all night Monday if need be to reach a decision.

The sudden postponement, which caught many diplomats by surprise, aroused considerable speculation.

ISRAELIS HOPEFUL

A high Israeli source said: "The British have broken through and have a majority for their resolution and the Russians don't like that."

One diplomatic source said the Soviet Union hopes to persuade Argentina and Brazil to introduce a resolution they have been holding up at the request of Israel. The Latin American proposal is closer to the Arab position than the one introduced by Britain.

Informed sources said that Syria, the Sudan and Algeria have come out privately against the British draft.

One Soviet delegate described the British compromise proposal as a "second American draft."

The Arabs have been supporting a rival draft submitted by India, Mali and Nigeria. It demands Israeli withdrawal from "all the territories occupied as a result of the recent conflict."

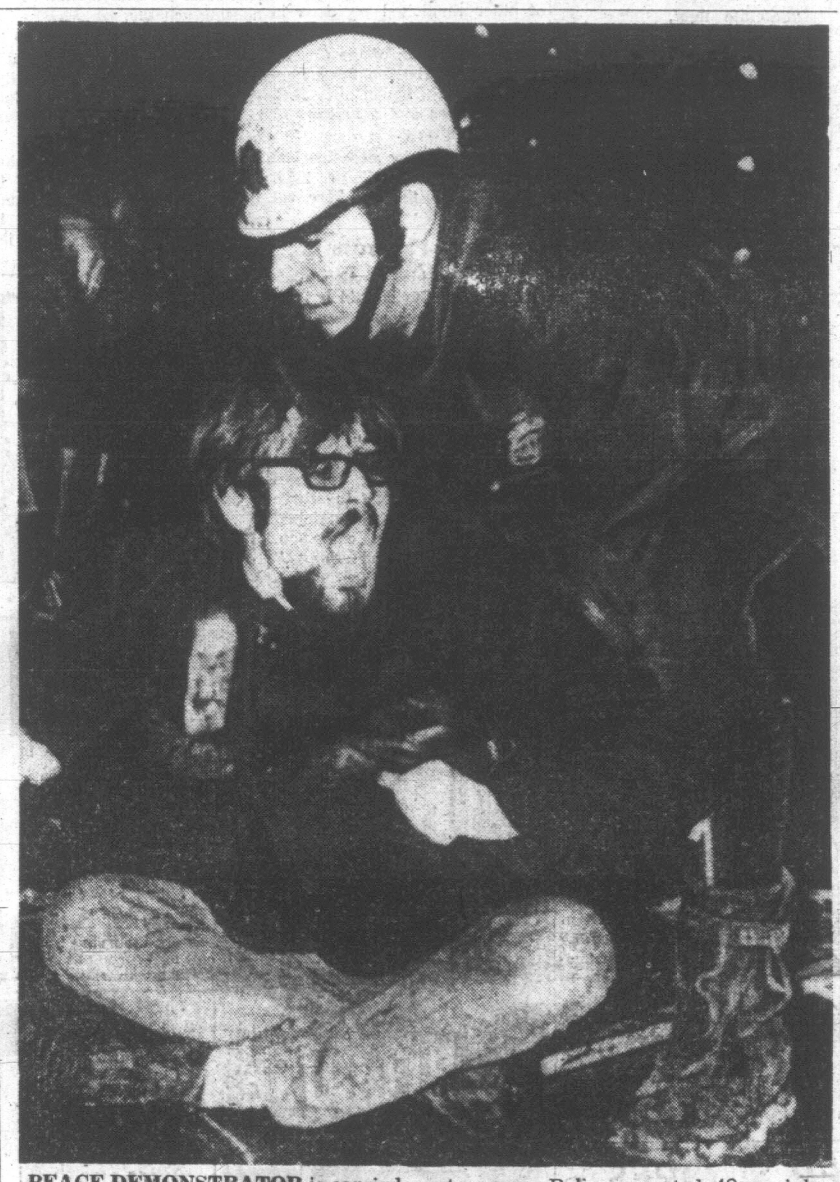
The Canadian view is that the British proposal is a carefully-worded attempt to find a balance between the two other plans.

NEGROES TRY SWAHILI

NEW YORK (AP)—A Bronx high school plans to offer a course in Swahili—spoken by 100,000,000 Africans — because its principal says it will give Negro youths a "sense of pride" in their heritage.

About half the school's 4,800 students are Negro.

RUNNING for president of the U.S. is Michigan Republican Governor George Romney, 60, who made formal announcement today, saying he hopes to lead his country back to morality and out of the Vietnam war. He is first major contender to declare publicly as an aspirant for November, 1968, election.



PEACE DEMONSTRATOR is carried away from U.S. Embassy in Montreal by police Friday night after refusing to move. Police arrested 48, mainly students, in one of series of protest marches. (CP Wirephoto)

Police Ride Into Crowd To Halt Viet Marchers

MONTREAL (CP) — Five policemen and several demonstrators were injured Friday night in a wild melee outside the U.S. consulate where 2,000 students were protesting against the war in Vietnam.

None of the injuries was serious in the fight which broke out when mounted policemen charged into the crowd in an attempt to choke off the 45-minute demonstration.

Police arrested 48 demonstrators after many had hurled bottles of paint and stones at the building, smashing windows and smearing the American eagle plaque with blood-red paint.

The demonstration started in Dominion Square in downtown Montreal and the marchers paraded up various streets and around cars before stopping in front of the consulate.

GROUPS JOIN

The original marchers were students from the University of Montreal who joined up with students from McGill and Sir George Williams universities as they marched up the mountain.

The dozen police officers on horses stood by as Pierre Lefrancois, president of l'Union general des etudiants du Quebec —which organized the demonstration—spoke to the crowd.

When the slogan-shouting and stone-throwing began, the horses were moved in. Several women broke into hysterics as the mounted police charged through the crowd scattering the demonstrators.

The protestors retaliated with a barrage of sticks, stones and heaps of garbage that lined the street in garbage cans awaiting collection.

QUEBEC-WIDE PROTEST

The demonstration in Montreal was part of a province-wide protest against American action in Vietnam. Students in at least 10 communities joined in demonstrations.

Francis Cunningham, U.S. consul in Quebec City, accepted a letter condemning American participation in the Vietnamese war as about 800 students paraded through the provincial capital. The students burned President Johnson in effigy.

When the Montreal demonstrators arrived at the consulate about 6:15 p.m., they were met by the mounted policemen, 50 officers on motorcycles and about 100 constables on foot carrying nightsticks.

At least one police car was battered and its windows smashed as the students split into small groups to retreat down side streets.

Sterling Rate Slashed 14.3%

LONDON (UPI) — The British government today announced a 14.3 per cent devaluation of the pound, dropping its value from $2.80 to $2.40 on the international market.

A government announcement said the devaluation, was effective as of 9:30 p.m. tonight.

It was the first devaluation of the British pound since 1949 and followed day long emergency conferences between Prime Minister Harold Wilson and leading government advisers.

The announcement by Chancellor of The Exchequer James Callaghan said interest rate on capital loans from banks was to be raised commensurately from 6 to 8 per cent — a credit-tightening measure to head off inflation.

CUT DEFENCE SPENDING

Callaghan also said the government was cutting its defence expenditures by over 100 million pounds ($240 million under the new rate) next year.

All stock exchanges will be closed Monday, a measure aimed at forestalling wild buying and selling on the market and to ensure continued stability.

The chancellor of the exchequer also announced tighter restrictions on installment buying of motor vehicles at home in another move aimed at cutting unnecessary spending to the very bone.

Strict watch will be maintained on dividends, and corporation taxes probably will go up. This will be set in the next budget, Callaghan said.

Britain last devalued the pound on Sept. 18, 1949. Its value then dropped from $4.03 to $2.80.

The dramatic announcement of the new valuation put an end to nearly a week of speculation about Britain's economic future.

The government confirmed shortly after the devaluation announcement that it was seeking a $1.4 billion standby loan from the International Monetary Fund (IMF).

U.S. Shuns Long Truce In Vietnam

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — U.S. officials indicated Friday night the U.S. is unlikely to go along with a Viet Cong announcement that would halt the Vietnam war for 13 days of holiday ceasefires.

There was no immediate formal comment, but informed officials reacted quickly to an announcement over the Viet Cong's Clandestine Liberation Radio, broadcasting from somewhere in the jungle.

They said it is "extremely unlikely" the U.S. would agree to the guerrilla plan for three-day ceasefires at Christmas and New Year's, and another seven days over the Vietnamese New Year celebrations at the end of January and beginning of February.

One official reiterated American objections to "prolonged truces" unless the Communists agreed to "some de-escalatory action."

"North Vietnam has only taken advantage of past cease fires to rush supplies to its forces and the Viet Cong in the South," he said.

The Viet Cong radio said it was calling the truces for reasons of "humanity." It linked the announcement with a new call to the South Vietnamese people to "rise up suddenly against the Americans to win back their freedom and sovereignty."

South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu indicated earlier he favors one-day truces for Christmas and New Year's and two days for Tet, the South Vietnamese New Year.

DISCUSS SITUATION

President Johnson and U.S. Vietnam Commander Gen. William C. Westmoreland are reliably reported to have discussed the American position on holiday truces this week, as the president and his top advisers reviewed the war.

Johnson was reliably reported to oppose any long ceasefires.

Westmoreland, as have other top U.S. military men, publicly voiced his opposition to any halts in bombing North Vietnam, though he said he could "live with" brief ceasefires.

TRUSTEES BLAME BUILDING FREEZE

School Shifts Loom in Area

Victoria area school trustees fear shift systems and higher building costs will follow a freeze in school building announced Friday.

"If they don't unplug this quickly it will mean gross overcrowding. Teachers won't tolerate crowded classrooms and I don't blame them. This means shifts," said Victoria school board chairman Peter Bunn.

"Every delay in our school program boosts the costs. The last freeze, followed by a carpenter's strike, increased the cost of some larger units 30 per cent," said Saanich school board chairman Mrs. Nora Lindsay.

"And a delay means a definite danger of shift systems," she added.

The trustees were commenting on the report of a new freeze on school building. It was made public following a meeting Friday between Greater Victoria trustees and provincial education department officials.

The freeze applies to school districts throughout the province.

Most of the districts have passed referendums for new schools and additions. Now they are waiting provincial approval of plans or permission to go to tender.

But the province, which would be required to pay up to 75 per cent of the cost in many cases, has dug in its heels.

The provincial agency which markets school board debentures will not try to raise money at current high interest rates.

The impasse was disclosed when Victoria trustees Bunn, Dr. Carron Jameson and Dr. Shorting met Deputy Education Minister Dr. Neil Perry and his administrators Frank Levirs and Joseph Phillipson.

The situation in Victoria is that almost $2.5 million in school projects are ready to go to tender—but the department has withheld final permission.

Dr. Jameson said the department indicated that only $100,000 of the total stands to be approved next week.

Stalled indefinitely are additions to Rockheights, Victor Street school for the retarded, Shelbourne, Hampton, Hillcrest, Richmond, Sir James Douglas and Quadra elementary schools.

The new Blanshard Street elementary school, which will replace the old North Ward, is unaffected by the freeze and work on it began Friday.

The freeze order revived the charge that British Columbia is starving services to people in order to feed all available monies into hydro projects on the Peace and Columbia rivers.

"The question becomes purely political—which has priority, schools or dams?" asked Dr. Jameson.

Said Mr. Bunn, "Mr. Bennett has already sacrificed the old people, is he now going to sacrifice the young?"

This was a reference to recent stories showing inadequacies in allowances for elderly people on welfare in boarding homes and private hospitals who obtain about half the assistance offered in Alberta.

Th' gov'mints bin blowin' hot an' cold on th' school freeze.

Canadian Gives Life To Save 200 Others

CALCUTTA, India (AP) — Steel workers in a town north of here paid homage Friday to the memory of a Canadian engineer who sacrificed his life to save 200 workers from being blown up in a plant accident.

Frank Noble, whose Canadian hometown was not known here, lost his life last week at an alloy steel plant in Durgapur, a steel town about 100 miles northwest of here.

Noble, an employee of Atlas Steel of Canada, was working with five other persons at a scarfing machine when an oxygen pipe exploded. Five persons were seriously injured.

Noble was not badly injured, but he went back inside the machine room to switch off the oxygen pipe. He came out severely burned and died in hospital.

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1967 —PAGE 23

Arthur Mayse

A time comes in the lives of childed but dogless couples when they begin to emerge from the slave - aspects of parenthood into a freedom that hasn't been theirs for many a year. It happens, though, that Win and I are possessed by a lively Labrador who needs plenty of exercise, and insists that we share his morning calisthenics.

I've heard of people, and Napoleon was one of them, who leap from their beds at the crack of dawn, eager to get the new day rolling.

But there was only one Bonaparte, for which fact we have cause to be grateful, and sleep is dearest to us in those last few minutes before the alarm cuts loose.

While the summons is still half an hour away, in pads our dog Lancer. He whines imperiously. When that doesn't work, he pokes his muzzle into the handiest face, and bestows lavish kisses.

The only way to stop his pestering is to get up and be taken for a walk.

Once out into the autumn gray, however, the effort becomes rewarding.

This is not the early-morning world of summer, where birds sing under a luminous sky. It is very still, and its colors are mostly subdued. A rockery evergreen gleams in cold silver, every needle beaded with overnight rain. Spiderwork is everywhere, and below the garden, a maple that has clung to its foliage stands yellow in the weeping mist.

★

Lancer has not paused to test the quality of the day. He's off and running with never a backward look, to check his network of dog-trots.

We go down more sedately, jogging in the rubber boots that November demands, along a trail carpeted solid with golden leaves. These are scarcely scuffed; the young feet that kept the trail brown in August will be under school desks in an hour or so.

The flanking brush is leafless; we can see through the thickets to the arbutus clump that flaunts its strong reds and greens no matter what the season.

We can even glimpse the ridged column of a fir tree that may, if legend has truth to back it, have seen Drake's Golden Hind pass on the strait below.

Hawks visit that tree, and so does the increasingly rare eagle. Once, studying it from the house through glasses, I spotted a raccoon napping in the cradle of its shattered top. Significantly, hen-pheasant feathers have been shed alongside the trail: were they scattered there late yesterday or only a few minutes ago by a masked marauder?

Here comes Lancer, bursting out of the up-trail bush. He is laughing all over his face, and he runs so fast that his flying hind-legs pass his backward-streaming ears. Dogs don't stay long away from their people. Lancer has blown off his excess energy but he has plenty left for a beach run and a swim.

★

We have come to the stage of the year when the flats are rarely exposed by day. The tide makes its long fall in the night hours; only a narrow strip of shingle lies bare between the sea and the drift logs.

Wintering ducks share the cove with seagulls. The pair of loons that arrived with October cruise closer in than usual. They are large sleek birds, dark with white throat-patches and dagger beaks. While we are still half the curve of the beach away, they taxi off across the water with a great beating of wings that seem too small for their bodies.

Lancer eyes them with interest, but contents himself with a swim for a thrown stick. He grabs it, turns with a fine swirl of his tail, and lunges toward the shore.

It's a temptation to stay down—peel ruffs of shavings around cedar sticks, and coax a beach fire into life. But we're overdue above, and such indulgence is not for work-days.

Anyway, Lancer's had his exercise. He will be content now to tag after Win at her housework until it's time to demand his evening stroll.

$30 Million Hospital Bill Facing Greater Victoria

INQUIRING CAMERA doesn't seem to bother student teacher Sharell Watts or Grade 5 class at Macauley elementary school. It's all in a good cause —producing better teachers and therefore better students. TV CAMERA HELPS CORRECT TEACHER FAULTS

'Gift' to See Themselves

By DON VIPOND
Education Reporter

It was Robbie Burns, 200 years ago, who lamented no gift to see ourselves as others see us.

It would save a lot of blunders and a few foolish notions, he suggested.

That "gift" has now arrived.

It's in the form of a small and highly portable TV camera in the hands of the faculty of education at the University of Victoria.

And it's roaming elementary schools in Greater Victoria eyeing student teachers for the same advantages Robbie foresaw.

●

Students training for teaching can see themselves as others see them.

This can be a lesson in itself. And with help from supervising teachers and the education faculty they can polish their techniques, correct faults they might never have known.

Dr. Winston Eshleman joined the faculty of education this year as a specialist in audio-visual technology.

"Teaching is a performing art, like drama or athletics," he says. "If an actor or athlete can benefit from watching himself perform it seems to me a teacher can gain from self-appraisal too."

The mini-TV equipment used in teacher training is a versatile tool with many applications in education.

●

It can video tape a student teacher at work and the tape can then be played back through the equivalent of a small TV set.

The picture can be put on at slow motion or stopped while an instructor pinpoints a situation. The tapes can be erased and used indefinitely.

The camera can be used to record expert teachers at work and classes then watch how it's done through bigger monitors.

The faculty this year has made a 50-minute tape on the library and this has been operation of the university's library and this has been scanned by the 60 different freshman English classes.

Many students didn't know how a university library works, says Dr. Eshleman. Imagine the problem taking groups of new students there and having a librarian go over the routine time and again ad nauseum?

The day may come when a central television room at the university with a bank of taped educative material may be tapped to feed a variety of programs into classrooms across the campus.

In the meantime, plans are under way to wire 17 classrooms with audio-visual cables and Dr. Eshleman hopes by next summer an acoustically-treated studio with control console might be a reality.

STOP ACTION is what the video tape of the educational TV camera gives and here Dr. Leslie Crawford, supervisor of student teachers on Uvic's faculty of education, uses the monitor to illustrate a point with student teacher Jean Gardner (centre) while teacher Susan Watson watches the all-seeing camera caught as well. TV. can also be used to tape veteran teachers at work for later viewing by classes of student teachers.

COMMISSION DROPS FOUR PER CENT

Hairdressers Take Pay Cut

Many Victoria hairdressing shops have cut the percentage employees earn.

This was disclosed today to The Times and later confirmed by Ralph Martino, president of the Victoria Styling Council.

Hairdressers commission is dropping from 47 per cent to 43 per cent of the amount of money they bring into the shops.

Mr. Martino said a good hairdresser works on her own, names her own hours and "in effect they are renting a place from us."

The recent provincial statutory holiday regulation providing eight paid holidays a year was "a big stab, so we just cannot afford it." Some hairdressers were making $40 to $50 a day, he said.

He said a $30,000 investment in a hairdressing shop and eight operators meant the owner makes 3½ to four per cent a year and "even the banks pay more interest."

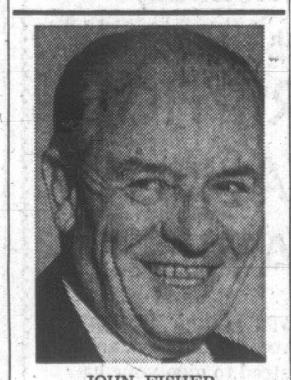
He described hairdressing as a "luxury, not a necessity," in arguing against increasing prices to the customer.

The Times' informant said his wife, a hairdresser, made $5,640 a year under the old percentage but it will be $5,160 under the new one.

"The 1930s was the last time I heard of pay cuts," he said.

"There's a difference between holding down (pay raises) and going down. It's the general injustice to all employees rather than one person."

The man said one shop owner argued that costs have gone up, but he replied that the only increase is in Canada Pension and statutory holiday with pay regulations because employees were on a fixed percentage for years.



JOHN FISHER
. . . to lead marchers

It May Well Be An Awesome Sight

People who think Canada's Centennial party all but ended with Expo are in for a rude awakening next Saturday.

There's a ground swell of enthusiasm in the air that suggests Victoria is going to follow other cities across Canada in making the Miles for Millions march the day to remember this year.

Picture 5,000 to 10,000 persons on the march along Government Street — more or less at one time! It's an awesome thought but it's likely to happen.

Appeal of the Miles for Millions march is its simplicity. It's for everyone because all you have to do is be able to walk.

That's not quite right either.

In Winnipeg earlier this year a man covered the full route, over 30 miles, in a wheelchair. Another man, on crutches, joined marchers.

★ ★ ★

Almost half a million Canadians will have joined in this youth project to send mobile classrooms to developing nations before the year is out.

And it's ironical so few Canadians will ever know how strongly their countrymen have backed each other, says Rev. Walter McLean, deputy director of the Centennial International Development program.

Elderly people, families, officials and crowds of youngsters have turned out by the thousands in city after city to march.

But national news media have never given the marches much attention, although local coverage has been fabulous, he said.

The march works this way.

Volunteers do the marching after lining up "sponsors" who agree to contribute so much for every mile they walk.

★ ★ ★

Greater Victoria school board chairman Peter Bunn, for example, has agreed to contribute $1 for each mile his two Oak Bay student volunteers march.

The route, measures 26½ miles through Greater Victoria.

The march starts at 8.30 a.m. in front of the Legislative Buildings and there are 13 check points where marchers get their cards stamped before the finish, back at the starting line.

Leading off will be Centennial Commissioner John Fisher, known as "Mr. Canada," and with him will be Mayor Hugh Stephen and Reeve Hugh Curtis who have challenged each other.

New St. Joseph's At Royal Oak Likely

By JIM HUME
Times City Hall Reporter

Greater Victoria will be faced with a minimum hospital bill of $30 million in the spring of 1968.

Toronto-based Dr. Harvey Agnew, now conducting a comprehensive survey into the area's hospital bed needs, will have his report ready for presentation next April.

But local experts say they don't need to wait for the report to know that the news will be bad.

They stress it is already an established fact that Victoria's bed shortage is more acute than in many parts of the country. And they add the sobering thought that of the 1,150 acute beds available in the area, some 900 are obsolete or of questionable value.

While admitting the situation is grave, hospital officials are reluctant to comment prior to the publication of Dr. Agnew's report.

But they are prepared to list some frightening figures indicating the seriousness of the predicament facing Greater Victoria in the immediate future.

Conservative estimators list the price of a new hospital bed at $30,000. (In Vancouver the cost of a new bed for the Vancouver General has been established at $60,000 a bed.)

At the $30,000 figure it would cost Greater Victoria $27 million to cancel out existing obsolescent beds and replace the units with a modern plant and equipment.

At St. Joseph's Hospital alone it is estimated that $15 million would be required to bring the hospital up to modern, acceptable standards.

"And even after we had spent the $15 million we would still have the old St. Joseph's, a better one, true, but still a building that is not designed for modern hospital needs," says one St. Joseph's official.

The answer? Dr. Agnew may have it in the spring.

Conversion for St. Joseph's

One of the suggestions he could make is that a new 500-bed St. Joseph's be built in the Royal Oak area while the existing hospital be converted into an extended care and chronic care centre.

"There are really three alternatives," says one expert.

"We could, at a cost of around $20 million, build a new hospital at Royal Oak and bring St. Joseph's and Jubilee up to standard.

"But three hospitals in the area would create their own major problems.

"Doctors are already hard pressed for time. I don't think it would be physically possible for them to visit three hospitals each day and still find time for their office practice.

"A third acute care hospital would also create a tremendous staffing problem because nurses and technicians are not exactly in abundant supply.

"I feel sure that if it was decided to build a third acute care hospital doctors would have to decide which two they would use to the detriment of the third. And I am also sure that both Jubilee and St. Joseph's would be hit hard by lack of staff."

The second suggestion has already been mentioned: Convert St. Joseph's into an extended care hospital while building a new acute care St. Joseph's.

Have They Enough Experience?

The third alternative: Build a new Rest Haven Hospital to be administered by the Seventh Day Adventists while still converting St. Joseph's to an extended care hospital.

"The only thing worrying me about the last suggestion may be unfounded," said one local doctor. "Rest Haven at Sidney is just a small hospital and easy to administer. I am just wondering if the people who have been running it for so many years have the administrative skills to take over a highly complex 500-bed operation.

"And I wonder too if it would be morally right for the community to turn its back on the Sisters of St. Ann who for close to 100 years have devoted their lives to hospital work for the benefit of the people of Victoria."

Whichever alternative Dr. Agnew suggests the bill will remain unchanged.

A new 500-bed hospital is a must if the existing intolerable situation is to be relieved and the cost will be over $20 million.

The modernization of areas of the Jubilee and St. Joseph's would push the total bill to almost double that total.

And the extended and chronic care problem—one of the greatest causes of the present bed shortage—would remain unsolved.

"I think we are going to have to face it, a new St. Joseph's in the Royal Oak area will have to be the answer. It will be the most economical in the long run and by converting the existing plant to an extended care centre the bed shortage would be dramatically relieved," said one expert.

"But even doing it that way the new hospital, the urgent changes needed at Jubilee and the conversion of St. Joseph's will mean expenditures in excess of $30 million."

Costs Soared Since 1964

Three years ago, in 1964, the Victoria and District Hospitals' Planning Council came up with some figures on funds required to bring existing hospital plants up to reasonable modern standards.

- St. Joseph's Hospital — $12,576,000.
- Royal Jubilee Hospital — $8,204,600.
- Rest Haven Hospital — $2,500,000.
- Gorge Road Hospital — $456,000.
- Queen Alexandra Solarium — $35,000.
- A new 200 bed hospital — $4,000,000.

But that was three years ago and construction costs have soared since that $27,773,200 cost figure was made public.

In addition the provincial government has stated that the community needs between 500 and 550 new extended care beds if the present situation is to be eased.

Mayor Hugh Stephen, long a student of the growing hospital bed crisis, has stated on several occasions that he feels a $30 million bill will be rock bottom when the situation is eventually faced.

"I feel in my own mind that it is going to cost us a minimum of between $30 and $35 million," he said recently.

"But this is a task we have to face," he added. "Whatever solution Dr. Agnew comes up with we have to realize that we have a tremendous task ahead of us."

Food Stall Needs Truck

Food, money and a truck are needed for this month's free food stall, convenor Mrs. Joan Price said Friday.

The truck is required to take donations from city wholesalers to the stall to be held Nov. 25.

Accepting calls for donations and pickups this month is Mrs. Marion Lingard at 385-0116.

Speedy Trip To Court

A young hit-and-run driver today was fined a total of $195 on three charges.

David Parsons, 19, of 17 Boyd St., pleaded guilty to careless driving, failing to remain at the scene of an accident, and being a minor in possession of alcohol.

Central court was told Parsons' car struck a parked car on Courtney Street Friday. Police said he then drove off at a high speed and was finally stopped at Boyd and Dallas.

They said while they talked to Parsons, a bottle of alcohol fell from his jacket onto the front seat.

Magistrate Harold Alder fined Parsons $75 for careless driving, $100 for leaving the accident scene, and $20 for possession of alcohol. His driver's licence was suspended.

'Dangerous' Powder Withdrawn

Modelling powder, described by Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread as "potentially dangerous," has been withdrawn from Victoria schools.

The asbestos powder is used to make a modelling paste by mixing it with water but Greater Victoria's medical health officer said the fibres in the dry powder can cause irritation in the lungs.

Order to discontinue use of the powder in Victoria schools was issued Friday by superintendent Joseph Chell and Harold O'Donnell, supervisor of elementary education.

Mr. O'Donnell said that use of the powder has been discontinued and "any further action will depend on Dr. Whitbread."

Police Ride Into Crowd To Halt Viet Marchers

MONTREAL (CP)—Five policemen and several demonstrators were injured Friday night in a wild melee outside the U.S. consulate where 2,000 students were protesting against the war in Vietnam.

None of the injuries was serious in the fight which broke out when mounted policemen charged into the crowd in an attempt to choke off the 45-minute demonstration.

Police arrested 48 demonstrators after many had hurled bottles of paint and stones at the building, smashing windows and smearing the American eagle plaque with blood-red paint.

The demonstration started in Dominion Square in downtown Montreal and the marchers paraded up various streets and around cars before stopping in front of the consulate.

GROUPS JOIN

The original marchers were students from the University of Montreal who joined up with students from McGill and Sir George Williams universities as they marched up the mountain.

The dozen police officers on horses stood by as Pierre Lefrancois, president of l'Union general des etudiants du Quebec —which organized the demonstration—spoke to the crowd.

When the slogan-shouting and stone-throwing began, the horses were moved in. Several women broke into hysterics as the mounted police charged through the crowd scattering the demonstrators.

The protestors retaliated with a barrage of sticks, stones and heaps of garbage that lined the street in garbage cans awaiting collection.

QUEBEC-WIDE PROTEST

The demonstration in Montreal was part of a province-wide protest against American action in Vietnam. Students in at least 10 communities joined in demonstrations.

Francis Cunningham, U.S. consul in Quebec City, accepted a letter condemning American participation in the Vietnamese war as about 800 students paraded through the provincial capital. The students burned President Johnson in effigy.

When the Montreal demonstrators arrived at the consulate about 6:15 p.m., they were met by the mounted policemen. 50 officers on motorcycles and about 100 constables on foot carrying nightsticks.

At least one police car was battered and its windows smashed as the students split into small groups to retreat down side streets.

PRICELESS articles were stolen from country home of Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery Friday night while he was in London celebrating his 80th birthday. The British war hero today appealed for return of the historic gifts, many of which were given him by various governments.

Canadian Gives Life To Save 200 Others

CALCUTTA, India (AP) — Steel workers in a town north of here paid homage Friday to the memory of a Canadian engineer who sacrificed his life to save 200 workers from being blown up in a plant accident.

Frank Noble, whose Canadian hometown was not known here, lost his life last week at an alloy steel plant in Durgapur, a steel town about 100 miles northwest of here.

Noble, an employee of Atlas Steel of Canada, was working with five other persons at a scarfing machine when an oxygen pipe exploded. Five persons were seriously injured.

Noble was not badly injured, but he went back inside the machine room to switch off the oxygen pipe. He came out completely burned and died in hospital.

Russia Clips UN Debate On Mideast

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Weary members of the United Nations Security Council embarked today on a weekend of negotiations over three rival resolutions aimed at breaking the Middle East stalemate.

The 15-nation council had hoped to reach a showdown vote Friday but adjourned after nine minutes. Bulgaria, at the obvious behest of the Soviet Union, asked for the adjournment until Monday, saying it awaited instructions from home.

One informed source said the Russians had sought a private agreement for the adjournment, but U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg retorted: "If you want a delay, you'll have to stand up and ask for it." Incensed, the Russians handed the assignment to Bulgaria, the other Communist member of the council.

Britain's Lord Caradon told reporters later that Council President Manadou Kante of Mali had promised to keep the group in session all night Monday if need be to reach a decision.

The sudden postponement, which caught many diplomats by surprise, aroused considerable speculation.

ISRAELIS HOPEFUL

A high Israeli source said: "The British have broken through and have a majority for their resolution and the Russians don't like that."

One diplomatic source said the Soviet Union hopes to persuade Argentina and Brazil to introduce a resolution they have been holding up at the request of Israel. The Latin American proposal is closer to the Arab position than the one introduced by Britain.

Informed sources said that Syria, the Sudan and Algeria have come out privately against the British draft.

One Soviet delegate described the British compromise proposal as a "second American draft."

The Arabs have been supporting a rival draft submitted by India, Mali and Nigeria. It demands Israeli withdrawal from "all the territories occupied as a result of the recent conflict."

The Canadian view is that the British proposal is a carefully-worded attempt to find a balance between the two other plans.

RUNNING for president of the U.S. is Michigan Republican Governor George Romney, 60, who made formal announcement today, saying he hopes to lead his country back to morality and out of the Vietnam war. He is first major contender to declare publicly as an aspirant for November, 1968, election.

Cong Offer Rebuffed

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — U.S. officials indicated Friday night the U.S. is unlikely to go along with a Viet Cong announcement that would halt the Vietnam war for 13 days of holiday ceasefires.

There was no immediate formal comment, but informed officials reacted quickly to an announcement over the Viet Cong's Clandestine Liberation Radio, broadcasting from somewhere in the jungle.

They said it is "extremely unlikely" the U.S. would agree to the guerrilla plan for three-day ceasefires at Christmas and New Year's, and another seven days over the Vietnamese New Year celebrations at the end of January and beginning of February.

One official reiterated American objections to "prolonged truces" unless the Communists agreed to "some de-escalatory action."

"North Vietnam has only taken advantage of past cease fires to rush supplies to its forces and the Viet Cong in the South," he said.

The Viet Cong radio said it was calling the truces for reasons of "humanity." It linked the announcement with a new call to the South Vietnamese people to "rise up suddenly against the Americans to win back their freedom and sovereignty."

South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu indicated earlier he favors one-day truces for Christmas and New Year's and two days for Tet, the South Vietnamese New Year.

DISCUSS SITUATION

President Johnson and U.S. Vietnam Commander Gen. William C. Westmoreland are reliably reported to have discussed the American position on holiday truces this week, as the president and his top advisers reviewed the war.

Johnson was reliably reported to oppose any long ceasefires.

Westmoreland, as have other top U.S. military men, publicly voiced his opposition to any halts in bombing North Vietnam, though he said he could "live with" brief ceasefires.

Extremists Condemned By Kennedy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Robert F. Kennedy (Dem.-N.Y.) condemns "extremists on both sides" of the Vietnam issue, saying they make it difficult to carry on a responsible dialogue on war policies.

Kennedy, who has been restrained in his criticisms of President Johnson's course, said in an interview he agrees with the president that what Johnson called storm trooper tactics do not advance the case of dissenters.

By "extremists," Kennedy said he meant those who violently demonstrate against the president's policies and supporters of those policies who indulge in name-calling and question the patriotism of critics.

Kennedy's appeared to be a typical reaction to Friday's news conference, at which Johnson defended his policies in lively fashion.

However, Senator Albert Gore (Dem.-Tenn.), a Senate foreign relations committee member, challenged Johnson's contention that national security is involved in the war. He said Johnson engaged in oversimplifications which "create dissent rather than allay it."

WIRE BRIEFS

Heavy Fighting in Viet Highlands

SAIGON (AP)—Heavy fighting broke out today nine miles west of Dak To in South Vietnam's embattled central highlands where U.S. forces drove North Vietnamese troops from two strategic peaks Friday.

Mill Closure Sparks March

SYDNEY (CP)—About 20,000 persons were expected to take part in a "parade of concern" through Sydney streets Sunday.

The parade, designed to focus national attention on the economic problems of the area, was organized after Dominion Steel and Coal Corp. announced Oct. 13 it would close the steel mill here next spring.

Decision Due Monday on Pound Crisis

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain today tensely awaited an expected government announcement on measures to solve the latest sterling crisis, following three days of speculation and relentless pressure on the pound.

Financial experts agree that, following another heavy day for the pound on foreign exchange markets Friday, the government would have to break its silence and announce a decision before Monday.

Big Liner Crippled By Fire

HALIFAX (CP)—The Swedish-American liner Gripsholm was reported heading for New York at eight knots this morning after making repairs to her port engine damaged by an engine room fire Friday night.

Indian Member of ICC Killed in Raid

NEW DELHI (AP)—A spokesman for the Indian government said today it is awaiting details on reports that an Indian sergeant was killed and another Indian national injured in U.S. air raids on Hanoi Friday.

Nhan Dan, North Vietnam's official newspaper, says that U.S. raiders "fired missiles on the office of Indian delegation to the Hanoi bureau of the International Control Commission, killing or wounding a number of Indian nationals."

TRUSTEES BLAME BUILDING FREEZE

School Shifts Loom in Area

Victoria area school trustees fear shift systems and higher building costs will follow a freeze in school building announced Friday.

"If they don't unplug this quickly it will mean gross overcrowding. Teachers won't tolerate crowded classrooms and I don't blame them. This means shifts," said Victoria school board chairman Peter Bunn.

"Every delay in our school program boosts the costs. The last freeze, followed by a carpenter's strike, increased the cost of some larger units 30 per cent," said Saanich school board chairman Mrs. Nora Lindsay.

"And a delay means a definite danger of shift systems," she added.

The trustees were commenting on the report of a new freeze on school building. It was made public following a meeting Friday between Greater Victoria trustees and provincial education department officials.

The freeze applies to school districts throughout the province.

Most of the districts have passed referendums for new schools and additions. Now they are waiting provincial approval of plans or permission to go to tender.

But the province, which would be required to pay up to 75 per cent of the cost in many cases, has dug in its heels.

The provincial agency which markets school board debentures will not try to raise money at current high interest rates.

The impasse was disclosed when Victoria trustees Bunn, Dr. Carron Jameson and Dr. Shorting met Deputy Education Minister Dr. Neil Perry and his administrators Frank Levirs and Joseph Phillipson.

The situation in Victoria is that almost $2.5 million in school projects are ready to go to tender—but the department has withheld final permission.

Dr. Jameson said the department indicated that only $100,000 of the total stands to be approved next week.

Stalled indefinitely are additions to Rockheights, Victor Street school for the retarded, Shelbourne, Hampton, Hillcrest, Richmond, Sir James Douglas and Quadra elementary schools.

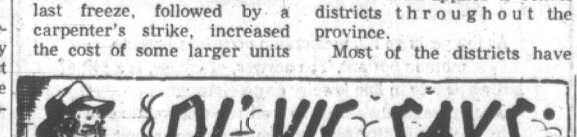
The new Blanshard Street elementary school, which will replace the old North Ward, is unaffected by the freeze and work on it began Friday.

The freeze order revived the charge that British Columbia is starving services to people in order to feed all available monies into hydro projects on the Peace and Columbia rivers.

"The question becomes purely political—which has priority, schools or dams?" asked Dr. Jameson.

Said Mr. Bunn, "Mr. Bennett has already sacrificed the old people, is he now going to sacrifice the young?"

This was a reference to recent stories showing inadequacies in allowances for elderly people on welfare in boarding homes and private hospitals who obtain about half the assistance offered in Alberta.



Th' gov'mints bin blowin' hot an' cold on th' school freeze.

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1967 —PAGE 23

Arthur Mayse

A time comes in the lives of childed but dogless couples when they begin to emerge from the slave-aspects of parenthood into a freedom that hasn't been theirs for many a year. It happens, though, that Win and I are possessed by a lively Labrador who needs plenty of exercise, and insists that we share his morning calisthenics.

I've heard of people, and Napoleon was one of them, who leap from their beds at the crack of dawn, eager to get the new day rolling.

But there was only one Bonaparte, for which fact we have cause to be grateful, and sleep is dearest to us in those last few minutes before the alarm cuts loose.

While the summons is still half an hour away, in pads our dog Lancer. He whines imperiously. When that doesn't work, he pokes his muzzle into the handiest face, and bestows lavish kisses.

The only way to stop his pestering is to get up and be taken for a walk.

Once out into the autumn grey, however, the effort becomes rewarding.

This is not the early-morning world of summer, where birds sing under a luminous sky. It is very still, and its colors are mostly subdued. A rockery evergreen gleams in cold silver, every needle beaded with overnight rain. Spiderwork is everywhere, and below the garden, a maple that has clung to its foliage stands yellow in the weeping mist.

★

Lancer has not paused to test the quality of the day. He's off and running with never a backward look, to check his network of dog-trots.

We go down more sedately, jogging in the rubber boots that November demands, along a trail carpeted solid with golden leaves. These are scarcely scuffed; the young feet that kept the trail brown in August will be under school desks in an hour or so.

The flanking brush is leafless; we can see through the thickets to the arbutus clump that flaunts its strong reds and greens no matter what the season.

We can even glimpse the ridged column of a fir tree that may, if legend has truth to back it, have seen Drake's Golden Hind pass on the strait below.

Hawks visit that tree, and so does the increasingly rare eagle. Once, studying it from the house through glasses, I spotted a raccoon napping in the cradle of its shattered top. Significantly, hen-pheasant feathers have been shed alongside the trail: were they scattered there late yesterday or only a few minutes ago by a masked marauder?

Here comes Lancer, bursting out of the up-trail bush. He is laughing all over his face, and he runs so fast that his flying hind-legs pass his backward-streaming ears. Dogs don't stay long away from their people. Lancer has blown off his excess energy but he has plenty left for a beach run and a swim.

★

We have come to the stage of the year when the flats are rarely exposed by day. The tide makes its long fall in the night hours; only a narrow strip of shingle lies bare between the sea and the drift logs.

Wintering ducks share the cove with seagulls. The pair of loons that arrived with October cruise closer in than usual. They are large sleek birds, dark with white throat-patches and dagger beaks. While we are still half the curve of the beach away, they taxi off across the water with a great beating of wings that seem too small for their bodies.

Lancer eyes them with interest, but contents himself with a swim for a thrown stick. He grabs it, turns with a fine swirl of his tail, and lunges toward the shore.

It's a temptation to stay down—peel ruffs of shavings around cedar sticks, and coax a beach fire into life. But we're overdue above, and such indulgence is not for work-days.

Anyway, Lancer's had his exercise. He will be content now to tag after Win at her housework until it's time to demand his evening stroll.

TV CAMERA HELPS CORRECT TEACHER FAULTS

'Gift' to See Themselves

By DON VIPOND
Education Reporter

It was Robbie Burns, 200 years ago, who lamented "no gift to see ourselves as others see us."

It would save a lot of blunders and a few foolish notions, he suggested.

That "gift" has now arrived.

It's in the form of a small and highly portable TV camera in the hands of the faculty of education at the University of Victoria.

And it's roaming elementary schools in Greater Victoria eyeing student teachers for the same advantages Robbie foresaw.

●

Students training for teaching can see themselves as others see them.

This can be a lesson in itself. And with help from supervising teachers and the education faculty they can polish their techniques, correct faults they might never have known.

Dr. Winston Eshleman joined the faculty of education this year as a specialist in audio-visual technology.

"Teaching is a performing art, like drama or athletics," he says. "If an actor or athlete can benefit from watching himself perform it seems to me a teacher can gain from self-appraisal too."

The mini-TV equipment used in teacher training is a versatile tool with many applications in education.

●

It can video tape a student teacher at work and the tape can then be played back through the equivalent of a small TV set.

The picture can be put on at slow motion or stopped while an instructor pinpoints a situation. The tapes can be erased and used indefinitely.

The camera can be used to record expert teachers at work and classes then watch how it's done through bigger monitors.

The faculty this year has made a 50-minute tape on the library and this has been operation of the university's library and this has been scanned by the 60 different freshman English classes.

Many students didn't know how a university library works, says Dr. Eshleman. Imagine the problem taking groups of new students there and having a librarian go over the routine time and again ad nauseum?

The day may come when a central television room at the university with a bank of taped educative material may be tapped to feed a variety of programs into classrooms across the campus.

In the meantime, plans are under way to wire 17 classrooms with audio-visual cables and Dr. Eshleman hopes by next summer an acoustically-treated studio with control console might be a reality.

STOP ACTION is what the video tape of the educational TV camera gives and here Dr. Leslie Crawford, supervisor of student teachers on Uvic's faculty of education, uses the monitor to illustrate a point with student teacher Jean Gardner (centre) while teacher Susan Watson watches the all-seeing camera caught as well. TV. can also be used to tape veteran teachers at work for later viewing by classes of student teachers.

COMMISSION DROPS FOUR PER CENT

Hairdressers Take Pay Cut

Many Victoria hairdressing shops have cut the percentage employees earn.

This was disclosed today to The Times and later confirmed by Ralph Martino, president of the Victoria Styling Council.

Hairdressers commission is dropping from 47 per cent to 43 per cent of the amount of money they bring into the shops.

Mr. Martino said a good hairdresser works on her own, names her own hours and "in effect they are renting a place from us."

The recent provincial statutory holiday regulation providing eight paid holidays a year was "a big stab, so we just cannot afford it." Some hairdressers were making $40 to $50 a day, he said.

He said a $30,000 investment in a hairdressing shop and eight operators meant the owner makes 3½ to four per cent a year and "even the banks pay that much more interest."

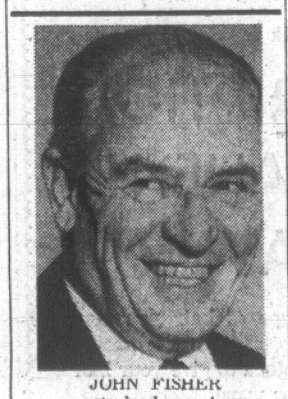
He described hairdressing as a "luxury, not a necessity," in arguing against increasing prices to the customer.

The Times' informant said his wife, a hairdresser, made $5,640 a year under the old percentage but it will be $5,160 under the new one.

"The 1930s was the last time I heard of pay cuts," he said.

"There's a difference between holding down (pay raises) and going down. It's the general injustice to all employees rather than one person."

The man said one shop owner argued that costs have gone up, but he replied that the only increase is in Canada Pension and statutory holiday with pay regulations because employees were on a fixed percentage for years.



JOHN FISHER
. . . to lead marchers

It May Well Be An Awesome Sight

People who think Canada's Centennial party all but ended with Expo are in for a rude awakening next Saturday.

There's a ground swell of enthusiasm in the air that suggests Victoria is going to follow other cities across Canada in making the Miles for Millions march the day to remember this year.

Picture 5,000 to 10,000 persons on the march along Government Street — more or less at one time! It's an awesome thought but it's likely to happen.

Appeal of the Miles for Millions march is it's simplicity. It's for everyone because all you have to do is be able to walk.

That's not quite right either. In Winnipeg earlier this year a man covered the full route, over 30 miles, in a wheelchair. Another man, on crutches, joined marchers.

★ ★ ★

Almost half a million Canadians will have joined in this youth project to send mobile classrooms to developing nations before the year is out.

And it's ironical so few Canadians will ever know how strongly their countrymen have backed each other, says Rev. Walter McLean, deputy director of the Centennial International Development program.

Elderly people, families, officials and crowds of youngsters have turned out by the thousands in city after city to march.

But national news media have never given the marches much attention, although local coverage has been fabulous, he said.

The march works this way.

Volunteers do the marching after lining up "sponsors" who agree to contribute so much for every mile they walk.

★ ★ ★

Greater Victoria school board chairman Peter Bunn, for example, has agreed to contribute $1 for each mile his two Oak Bay student volunteers march.

The route, measures 26½ miles through Greater Victoria.

The march starts at 8.30 a.m. in front of the Legislative Buildings and there are 13 check points where marchers get their cards stamped before the finish, back at the starting line.

Leading off will be Centennial Commissioner John Fisher, known as "Mr. Canada," and with him will be Mayor Hugh Stephen and Reeve Hugh Curtis who have challenged each other.

New St. Joseph's At Royal Oak Likely

By JIM HUME
Times City Hall Reporter

Greater Victoria will be faced with a minimum hospital bill of $30 million in the spring of 1968.

Toronto-based Dr. Harvey Agnew, now conducting a comprehensive survey into the area's hospital bed needs, will have his report ready for presentation next April.

But local experts say they don't need to wait for the report to know that the news will be bad.

They stress it is already an established fact that Victoria's bed shortage is more acute than in many parts of the country. And they add the sobering thought that of the 1,150 acute beds available in the area, some 900 are obsolete or of questionable value.

While admitting the situation is grave, hospital officials are reluctant to comment prior to the publication of Dr. Agnew's report.

But they are prepared to list some frightening figures indicating the seriousness of the predicament facing Greater Victoria in the immediate future.

Conservative estimators list the price of a new hospital bed at $30,000. (In Vancouver the cost of a new bed for the Vancouver General has been established at $60,000 a bed.)

At the $30,000 figure it would cost Greater Victoria $27 million to cancel out existing obsolescent beds and replace the units with a modern plant and equipment.

At St. Joseph's Hospital alone it is estimated that $15 million would be required to bring the hospital up to modern, acceptable standards.

"And even after we had spent the $15 million we would still have the old St. Joseph's, a better one, true, but still a building that is not designed for modern hospital needs," says one St. Joseph's official.

The answer? Dr. Agnew may have it in the spring.

Conversion for St. Joseph's

One of the suggestions he could make is that a new 500-bed St. Joseph's be built in the Royal Oak area while the existing hospital be converted into an extended care and chronic care centre.

"There are really three alternatives," says one expert.

"We could, at a cost of around $20 million, build a new hospital at Royal Oak and bring St. Joseph's and Jubilee up to standard.

"But three hospitals in the area would create their own major problems.

"Doctors are already hard pressed for time. I don't think it would be physically possible for them to visit three hospitals each day and still find time for their office practice.

"A third acute care hospital would also create a tremendous staffing problem because nurses and technicians are not exactly in abundant supply.

"I feel sure that if it was decided to build a third acute care hospital doctors would have to decide which two they would use to the detriment of the third. And I am also sure that both Jubilee and St. Joseph's would be hit hard by lack of staff."

The second suggestion has already been mentioned: Convert St. Joseph's into an extended care hospital while building a new acute care St. Joseph's.

Have They Enough Experience?

The third alternative: Build a new Rest Haven Hospital to be administered by the Seventh Day Adventists while still converting St. Joseph's to an extended care hospital.

"The only thing worrying me about the last suggestion may be unfounded," said one local doctor. "Rest Haven at Sidney is just a small hospital and easy to administer. I am just wondering if the people who have been running it for so many years have the administrative skills to take over a highly complex 500-bed operation.

"And I wonder too if it would be morally right for the community to turn its back on the Sisters of St. Ann who for close to 100 years have devoted their lives to hospital work for the benefit of the people of Victoria."

Whichever alternative Dr. Agnew suggests the bill will remain unchanged.

A new 500-bed hospital is a must if the existing intolerable situation is to be relieved and the cost will be over $20 million.

The modernization of areas of the Jubilee and St. Joseph's would push the total bill to almost double that total.

And the extended and chronic care problem—one of the greatest causes of the present bed shortage—would remain unsolved.

"I think we are going to have to face it, a new St. Joseph's in the Royal Oak area will have to be the answer. It will be the most economical in the long run and by converting the existing plant to an extended care centre the bed shortage would be dramatically relieved," said one expert.

"But even doing it that way the new hospital, the urgent changes needed at Jubilee and the conversion of St. Joseph's will mean expenditures in excess of $30 million."

Costs Soared Since 1964

Three years ago, in 1964, the Victoria and District Hospitals' Planning Council came up with some figures on funds required to bring existing hospital plants up to reasonable modern standards.

- St. Joseph's Hospital — $12,576,000.
- Royal Jubilee Hospital — $8,204,600.
- Rest Haven Hospital — $2,500,000.
- Gorge Road Hospital — $456,000.
- Queen Alexandra Solarium — $35,000.
- A new 200 bed hospital — $4,000,000.

But that was three years ago and construction costs have soared since that $27,773,200 cost figure was made public.

In addition the provincial government has stated that the community needs between 500 and 550 new extended care beds if the present situation is to be eased.

Mayor Hugh Stephen, long a student of the growing hospital bed crisis, has stated on several occasions that he feels a $30 million bill will be rock bottom when the situation is eventually faced.

"I feel in my own mind that it is going to cost us a minimum of between $30 and $35 million," he said recently.

"But this is a task we have to face," he added. "Whatever solution Dr. Agnew comes up with we have to realize that we have a tremendous task ahead of us."

Food Stall Needs Truck

Food, money and a truck are needed for this month's free food stall, convenor Mrs. Joan Price said Friday.

The truck is required to take donations from city wholesalers to the stall to be held Nov. 25.

Accepting calls for donations and pickups this month is Mrs. Marion Lingard at 385-0116.

Speedy Trip To Court

A young hit-and-run driver today was fined a total of $195 on three charges.

David Parsons, 19, of 17 Boyd St., pleaded guilty to careless driving, failing to remain at the scene of an accident, and being a minor in possession of alcohol.

Central court was told Parsons' car struck a parked car on Courtney Street Friday. Police said he then drove off at a high speed and was finally stopped at Boyd and Dallas.

They said while they talked to Parsons, a bottle of alcohol fell from his jacket onto the front seat.

Magistrate Harold Alder fined Parsons $75 for careless driving, $100 for leaving the accident scene, and $20 for possession of alcohol. His driver's licence was suspended.

'Dangerous' Powder Withdrawn

Modelling powder, described by Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread as "notentially dangerous," has been withdrawn from Victoria schools.

The asbestos powder is used to make a modelling paste by mixing it with water but Greater Victoria's medical health officer said the fibres in the dry powder can cause irritation in the lungs.

Order to discontinue use of the powder in Victoria schools was issued Friday by superintendent Joseph Chell and Harold O'Donnell, supervisor of elementary education.

Mr. O'Donnell said that use of the powder has been discontinued and "any further action will depend on Dr. Whitbread."
